Socialists Hear Third World Has Forced 'New Order'

GENEVA. Nov. 28—Developing countries have already forced the emergence of a "new political order" hased on their power to negotiate over raw material supplies, President Carlos Andrés Peréz of Venezuela told the world's Socialist parties here today.

President Pérez appeared on the last day of the Socialist International's 13th congress, stopping off on his way from Moscow to Madrid

Since Venezuela is a member of the Organization of Petroïeum Exporting Countries, his stand carried special weight in the arguments favoring Socialist support for new and more generous relations hetween industrialized and developing countries.

While 52 countries are represented a the meeting, the core of the organization consists of parties that grew up with the Western world's industrial labor movement. There was a conseosus among the delegates, however, that they must give more backing to the third world and ex pand their relations with it.

President Pérez put the choice bluntly "We would not even like to think of what would happeo" if the effort to redis-tribute resources between the rich and poor nations fails," he said. "The establishment of a new international economic order is a precondition for peace. Other-wise, the world's political equilibrium will be seriously threatened."

Wide Spectrum of Views

Although he gave no hint of what OPEC might decide at its next meeting on oil prices. Mr. Perez said: 'The increase of petroleum prices is by no means a selfish act of OPEC members for the exclusive benefit of their countries. It represents the irrevocable decision to dignify the terms of trade, to revalue raw materials and other hasic products of the third

Like the Socialist International itself the congress speeches and its final resolu-tion reflected the wide spectrum of views held today by Socialist leaders.

The resolution on the political situation spoke of the "crisis in world capitalism

"In today's world," it said, "capitalism and Communism continue to express the major forms of oppression in modern society. However, Egon Bahr, the secretary of West Germany's ruling Socialist party, said that the congress showed a drastic change from the orthodox Marxist lan-guage of the International's postwar meeting in Frankfurt 25 years ago. Another leading delegate said that as the International had clearly moved closer to third-world aspirations, it had gained a special importance as one of the few groups that could help link devel-oping countries with the West and assist them to resist pressures from the Commu-

Warnings Against Communism

The Socialist Prime Minister of Portugal, Mario Sodres, and Felipe González, leader of Spaln's Socialist Workers Party warned delegates against the dangers of Communism and stressed the need for Socialists to defend democratic rights.

Monument to Victims Of Stalin Is Sought

MOSCOW, Nov. 28 (Reuters)-A group of dissidents in Leningrad said today that they had written to Mayor Lev Zaikov asking him to give them a site where they could set up a monument to the victims of Stalin's purges.

The eight dissidents said to their letter that the time was ripe for such a monument since it was exactly 20 years since Nikita S. Khrushchev, the late Soviet leader, denounced Stalin's actions in a speech at the 20th Communist Party Congress.

Mr. Khrushchev once anoounced that he would set up such a monument, but he never did so and his successors have sought to drop the topic of Stalin's purges. It is believed that millions died in the purges.

Conspicuous Absences at Riyadh

Israeli sources noted that neither Iraq nor Libya, the two most radical Arab countries, in the Israeli view, took part in the Riyadb meeting. This was considered further circumstactial confirmation of reports from third parties that Syria had agreed to the Egyptian approach on negotiations with Israel.

The new Saudi role has also emerged in North Africa, where Prince Fahd, a major figure in the Government of King Khalid, has been traveling between Morocco and Algeria in an effort to compose their differences over the Western Sahara.

Some Western European leaders at the Socialist conference here in Geneva, have been among the recent high-level visitors to Riyadh. They came back with reports that Kbalid had brought about a change of atmosphere in his country.

These reports have reached the Israelis, a climate, Israeli officials feel, these neighboring Arab leaders would become much more interested in a settlemen: with Israel, to give priority to their home fronts. The Israeli view remains wary, how-ever. The current estimate is that Egypt is still not seeking a complete peace agreement but only an accord on "nonbel-ligerence" that would fall well short of a permanent settlement.

The Israeli officials continue to believe that their Arab opponents will not be ready for peace until they are convinced that there can be no solution through another war however long delayed. Nonetheless, the Iraeli interest in returning to the negotiating table in the near future was stressed more strongly than had been the case for a long time.

Choice for Jamaicans: Ties With Third or Whole World

By EDWARD COWAN Special to The New York Times

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 27-People everywhere throughout this island feel that parliamentary elections on Dec. 15 mark a fateful choice for the island's 2.1 million people.

Most Jamaicans, whether in mountain villages where there is little work, in the bustling-streets and crowded ghettos of Kingston, on the cool verandas of the hillside villas above the capital, in the shops of the North Coast-whose proprietors fear their second disappointing tourist season io succession is about to begin -feel that the election will bring to an end the tension and violence, shootings and arson that began early this year.

The choice before the voters is between Prime Minister Michael Manley's brand of "democratic socialsm," with a nived economy and stronger ties to developing countries, including Cuba, and the com-mitment of Edward Seaga, the leader of the opposition, to private ownership and "balanced relations" with all countries, ncluding the United States.

There had been shooting between po-i litical factions but evidently it had not been directed at the Labor Party leaders.

Mr. Smith of the Agency for Public Information said the other day that the initial story bad grown out of a misunderstanding."

The initial dispatch appeared in a num-ber of newspapers. The New York Times carried it at leogth under a headline that ran across the top of an inside page. Three days later, Reinters sent a much shorter corrective article. The Times printed it under a one-column headline. An aide to Prime Minister Manley complained the other day that the corrective dispatch har not been given equal promin-

The shootings, which have abated considerably since the emergency powers went into effect, have occurred mainly in the slums of Kingston, especially the Treochtown section, but oot in the tourist beach towyns of the North Coast.

In one episode last spring, residents of tenemeous attacked wrecking crews trying to carry out an official demolition order. In March, violence grew out of left-wing demonstrations against the Central Intelligence Agency that were timed to occur during an International Mone tary Fund meeting bere that brought offi cials from many countries.

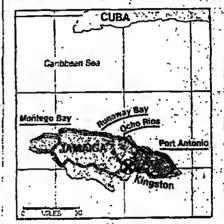

Many Jamaicans say that the violence has been essentially skirmishing between political factions. Urban poverty and disconteot may be a catalyst.

An Evangelical Style in Politics

In the dusty mountain village of Walk-ers Wood, Mr. Manley's motorcade stopped on Wednesday for a rally before 300 people.

"They tell you I am against America," the Prime Minister said. "Lie. Lie. Lie. We have sought to maintain good rela-tions with the U.S.A. We make tourists

The New York Times/Nov. 29, 1976 Violence has been confined mostly to Kingston (cross) but tension must be ended to attract tourists to places with names underlined.

Edward Seaga, opposition leader

Jamaicans feel about the warm relation ship he has developed with Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Mr. Manley has repeatedly insisted the he is a democrat and a socialist, not Communist. Some Jamaicans who belies him worry nevertheless about Cuban is fluence and possible subversion.

"On our island we don't want Comm nism," said a young man who worl at the bauxite refinery near Ewarton I said wages there run from $230 for labo ers to $440 for the most highly skille The minimum wage is 50 cents an hor Polls showed a swing to the Lab Party. Mr. Seaga said. However, mu of his prepared statement was devot to reasons why Labor might lose.

He said that the daily searches a detentions under the emergency powe meant that the election would out welcome."

As the raily ended, "Foreign Press" was played over the mobile loudspeaker.

Wearthe world's rarest sheep.

On ten farms in Australia, and nowhere else in the world, wool growers raise a breed of sheep whose fleece is of a gossamer fineness unequaled by any other.

The breed is called the merino herd. It is so rare that in a good year, perhaps 100 bales of its wool are shipped out.

It is so fine that when spun, a single pound of yarn unravels to 31 and 1/2 miles.

Huddersfield, England, a place singularly responsible for producing the finest woolens, is where the wool is spun and woven. And the resulting cloth is identified as Lumb's Huddersfield Super 100's, the 100's referring to the incredibly high number of threads per inch.

If there is a craftsman whose talents are on a par with the absolute luxury of this rare cloth, it is Chester Barrie of England. It's no coincidence that Chester Barrie is located in the same town that produces the Rolls Royce.

In fact, Chester Barrie is virtually a company without muchinery: only hand-tailoring can ensure a suit that is so perfect in every detail.

A limited number of these exquisite suits is now available in this country. And the only place to find available in this country. And the only place to find them is Barney's Oak Room.

It would be difficult to imagine a suit or coat more beautiful than one which embodies the luxury of the finest wool in the world, in combination with the magnificent craftsmanship and tailoring of Chester Barrie.

Even more difficult to imagine is the feeling of wearing one. We invite you to come in and do just that.

As of 1974, the American Hospital Association estimated that about 21/2 percent of toe cost of hospital operations went to pay for malpractice insurance. The figure has increased since, although the association has not completed its most recent study of the situation.

The association is also conducting a survey to see how many hospitals are "going bare," according to David Drake, its director of policy development. And it is looking into the steps that hospitals take to lower their susceptibility to malpractice suits, once they have assumed the total risk.

That question was brought to the attention of the association by David H. Hitt. director of the 1,300-bed Baylor Universi-Medical Center in Dallas. Mr. Hitt is a hoard member of the association and serves on oational and state maipractice insurance study commissions. He is

By PAUL GOLDBERGER Special to The New York Times

WILLIAMSBURG, Va.—There is a 173-acre section of this eastern Virginia town that contains almost 150 buildings, and it has become an American cliché. Colonial Williamsburg is as much a part of the national folklore as Gettysburg or Grant's Tomb, a place that millions of Americans have visited and virtually all of them have heard of Fifty years ago. Williamsburg was just a deteriorating small town, its major historic buildings from the days in the 18th century io which it served as Virginia's capital demolished and its houses in poor repair.

A local minister persuaded John D. Rockefeller Jr. to restore a few old buildings. Mr. Rockefeller's interest grew to the point where be decided in 1926 to undertake one of the most ambitious architectural projects of the 20th century, the restoration of the entire town and the recreation of the major buildings that had been lost.

He thought that the museum-type reconstruction might interest a visitor or two, and he suggested that a restored tavern with a few guest rooms would take care of such needs. But the reconstruction attracted tourists in such numbers that the foundation set up to manage the historic sector soon had to build one hotel, then a second, then a third. And commercial motels sprang up all around the town.

Now, on the 50th anniversary of its inception. Colonial Williamsburg's influence has been immense. It is, in a sense, the nation's premier attempt at historic preservation. As Carlisle Humelsme, president of Colonial Williamsburg, said, "Before us, preservation was just little old ladies in tennis shoes saving old houses. Williamsburg focused national attention on historic buildings for the first time, forcing people to think about towns as a whole as well as single buildings. This was the place that got the other places, like Charleston and Newport, interested in saving what they bad."

Set Off Other Efforts

Williamsburg thus stands as a symbolic beginning to the nation's historic preservation effort. For years, it had the field largely to itself, since it was not until 1949 that the National Trust for Historic Preservation was organized. and it was not until the mid-1960's that large-scale efforts at saving old buildings for active use instead of as museum places became common.

But Williamsburg's impact has been more than symbolic. It set off a generation of restoration-oriented architects, since the designers who were brought to Williamsburg to restore the deteriorated 18th-century buildings and re-create the demolished ones had to develop a new set of architectural skills to undertake the work. Before them, virtually no architects had training in restora-

And Williamsburg's popularity as a tourist attraction bas led to an entirely different kind of impact as well. The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation for years has licensed furniture manufacturers to reproduce 18th-century objects from its collections, and Williamsburg chairs and household objects have played a major role in the popularity of the style generally referred to as "colonial." Indeed, William J. Murtagh, keeper of the National Register of Historic Places, has evaluated Williamsburg's significance in terms of its role as "a formulator of popular 20th-ceotury taste."

Too Well Mannered

Still, Williamsburg remains some-what controversial in architectural circles. It is a perfectly manicured, resttul place, its traffic-free streets, clean lawns and employees in 18th-century costume creating the sense of a place that is not only too well mannered to be part of the 20th, but almost too well

mannered to have been part of the 18th
It is this quality, Williamsburg's museumlike unreality, that is slightly offputting at a time when historic preservation has come to mean inner-city renewal and active re-use of old build-ings rather than their preservation as slightly genteel tourist attractions.

Williamsburg does not have the flaw of vulgarity, nor the flaw of excessive cuteness; if anything is wrong with it it is that it feels somewhat like a house in Greenwich, just a bit too neat and prim and tasteful to be altogether convincing. The fact that its two major buildings, the Governor's Palace and the Capitol, are both 20th-century re-creations does not help in this re-

Providing Some Illusion

But Williamsburg's intent is to provide a certain degree of illusioo. Mr. Humelsine sometimes compares Colonial Willimsburge with "the magic of theme parks" of the Disneyland variety, and he says he prefers to view Wil liamsburg as an educational institution rather than as a purely architectural

'We are a large, diversified museum," he said. "I realize that the real challenge io preservation today is the cities. but our purpose has always been edu-

This. Williamsburg executives feel, is the justification for the restoration's emphasis on pure 18th-century design. The real 18th-century buildings of Williamsourg-those that were restored rather than re-created—had been given porches, verandas, cupolas and other pieces of 19th-century ornament over the years, and during the restoration this eclectic accumulation of later generations was swept away and the buildings returned to an approximate 18thcentury appearance.

This attitude, if anything, bas hardened over the years. Mr. Humelsine admits that good taste may bave been pursued for its own sake in the early years of the restoration, with elegant 18th-century implements placed in Williamsburg buildings without regard to whether or not they could really have beeo in their particular surroundings.

Unsuitable Pieces Stored

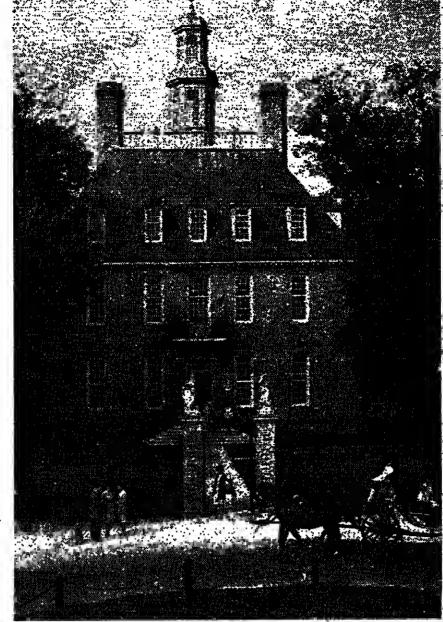

For example, a rare silver chandelier and an antique clock were installed in buildings whose occupants would have been unlikely to bave been able to own them. Now, these pieces are in storage -Mr. Humelsine hopes eventually to build a special gallery for such Wil-liamsburg collections—and the houses are furnished with items that are more historically accurate, if often less elegant in themselves.

The unreality of Williamsburg is not something for which its architects, working in the 1920's and 1930's, can really be blamed. Not only were they endeavoring to create an educational institution rather than an active, functioning city, they were also operating at a time when expectations surround-ing restored architecture were far more narrow. It is in large part Williams-burg's own success that bas altered these expectations toward places more intertwined with real life.

Like the artist who starts a movemen within which others pass him by, Williamsburg has helped preservation mature to a point where the attitudes it represents now seem not striking, but

The Watergate scandal, which toppled one President and haunted the next, made endowed with visibility and authority by the Republican record somewhat schizophrenic. Mr. Nixon absorbed power, Mr. Ford used it lightly. But six years of imperial Presidency and two of executive restraint worked in combination to alter the outlook, change the tone and, to some extent, restructure the shape of the executive branch.

White House Staff Grew

The White House staff, already aggrandized under President Johnson, grew sub-stantially as Mr. Nixon centralized authority. The acknowledged size of the Presidential staff was 208 when Mr. Johnson departed, and 522 by the beginning of Mr. Ford's final year.

Toward the close of his election campaign, Mr. Ford criticized his predecessor. for a "dictatorial" approach to governance. Nonetheless, Mr. Ford retained Mr. Nixon's White House instruments of that approach, including an Office of Congressional Relations that centralized communication or association with senators and representatives, an Office of Public Liaison that dealt directly with interest groups and an Office of Communications that leaped over the Washington press corps to sell White House views to editors and broadcasters across the country. The Cabinet, occasionally a repository of leaders and innovators, grew mori-bund, its members largely anonymous. as he pursued a policy barring new Feder-al programs in most areas.

But the notion exists even beyond Mr. Carter's circle of advisers that be may arrive at the White House at a propitious time, a time when expectations for Government performance are reduced, when a disgraced Presidency was restored to at least a minimum level of respectability by Mr. Ford, and when the Democrats control both the legislative and executive branches.

Undercover Investigators Employed to Check on Cheating by Weight and Other Violations of Law

By IVER PETERSON

HAUPPAUGE, L. I. - Suffolk County deli owners: watch out for those orders for a pound of macaroni. Bakers: weigh your cookies before you put them in the cookie tin, not afterward. Car dealers: get your facts straight on new-car service, especially when your customers are a young couple asking pointed questions about caring for the car after its's bought.

Because your customers may not be customers — they may be undercover sleuths from the Suffolk County Department of Consumer Affairs, and they're Sending out undercover customers to check on consumer fraud is just one of a dozen techniques that James J. Lack. Commissioner of Consumer Affairs for Suffolk County, uses to snare the shortweighters, the false promises, the hidden chargers that cause most of the 17,000 consumer complaints that come into his office each year,

"We ask for macaroni salad because it's cheap and because with all the air in the holes of macroni it's sometimes hard to pack a full pound into a one-pound container," Mr. Lack, 32 years old, said, "On a random basis, we find that the salad is short-weighted between 25 and 33 percent of the time."

With the cook'es, Mr. Lack's investigators have found that in about the same number of cases, bakers weigh the cookies in the cookie tin.

And when complaints came in last year from the owners of new Toyotas assert-ing that their dealer had charged them for a first 1,000-mile oil change and lubrication job that the manufacturer did not recommend, he sent out a young couple posing as prospective customers. dealers told the investigators that the extra service was routine, and Mr. Lack promptly subpoened the service records of the 924 Toyota buvers in 1975 to see if the added charges were widespread, The dealers are now fighting the sub-

The Case of Lawnmower Repairs Then there was the time Mr. Lack's office intentionally sbort-circuited the onoff switch of a lawnmower—a fault that would take five minutes and some friction tape to correct—and took it around to the lawnmower repairmen, saving it wouldn't start. One of the bills for the job ran over $60, the cheapest was $8. most took two weeks to be comoleted, and Mr. Lack's office is now preparing to ask the Suffolk County Legislature to require licenses for lawnmower repair-Consumer protection in Suffolk County and in most other counties in the state has changed over the last decade, and Mr. Lack is an example of the kind of change that is taking place. Ten years ago there was hardly a county in the state with its own public champion of con-sumer rights; today, most have them, according to the State Consumer Protec-

The board's spokesman, Jack Markodescribes these county-consumer "political necessities." "County governments must have them," Mr. Markowitz sald. "Candidates run on consumer-protection platforms and they couldn't survive politically without them.

Mr. Markowitz added that consumer problems, "like the price of utilities has become the No. 1 political issue—it's gone from being the price of turkey to questions of how the average worker is gring to survive in the marketplace."

With the new emphasis on consumer issues bas come a spate of new laws intended to protect buyers. These new laws, in turn, bave changed the public consumer-protection offices from being the domain of kindly women handing out advice on how to spot stale fish to that of lawyers, like Mr. Lack, whose offices are often more akin to law-enforcement

"That's what this is," Mr. Lack said the other day. "It's a law-enforcement agency-no ifs, ands or buts about itand we're looking for people who rip off, cheat, take people to the cleaners, whatever cliché you want to use."

One Pecalty: The 'Sell-off'

In enforcing the law, Mr. Lack likes to make the punishment fit the crime, and one penalty he uses is the "sell-off." Such as the time a supermarket was caught with a sign over the bacon advertising meat at $1.39 a pound while the bacon packages were labeled $1.79 the amount that the customers ended up being charged at the checkout counter.

"Normally a consumer-fraud hureau woud fine the company and the money would go to the county treasurer," Mr. Lack said. "But we got the store to agree to sell their bacon at cost—99 cents a pound—for two weeks instead." That way, he said with obvious satisfaction, the advantage goes back to the consumer who was bilked in the first place. Mr. Lack has used the same sell-off penalty in several other cases.

"It deprives the Suffolk County treasury of a few hundred bucks, but it provides direct restitution to the people who were victimized," be said. Besides the sell-off, and charging the offender for the cost of the investigation, Mr. Lack has forced false advertisers to run corrections. All of these penalties, he said. often end up costing the offender more than an ordinary fine anyway.

Most of the complaints that come into his office are about plumbing, electrical and home-improvement work, especially now that the housing market is sour in the surburbs and homeowners are investing in improvements to their present homes instead of moving to new ones. The county has enacted stringent licensing requirements for these kinds of work-Mr. Lack's office won't issue a license if there is an unsettled complaint against the company.

Enforcement of consumer laws such as these have, of course, landed Mr. Lack's office and others like his in court more than once. 'Directly or indirectly, I guess we're in every major court in the state," he said. "With the huilders over the ban on aluminum electrical wiring, with the phone company over the Yellow Pages, with the Tovota dealers over their service charges. Along with the friends he has made since he opened the office in January 1974: Mr. Lack has also picked up a few critics, most of them on the other side of the consumer issue from him.

West Germans' Finish Not Bad In Light of Missing Players

By ROBERT BYRNE

The West German team's fifth-place finish in the World Chess Olympiad in Haifa, Israel, behind the United the Netherlands, England and Argentina, was a creditable showing. considering that four of their grand-masters, Robert Hilbner, Helmut Pfleger, Klaus Darga and Lothar did not accompany the team. Chess competition is geared to the level of club match play in West Garmany with the result that only one of her top representatives. Ludek Pachman, a Czechoslovak émigré, can be ranked as a full-time career grandmaster. The others must juggle their vacation schedules to fit the tournament

This time the team was headed by Wolfgang Unzicker, backed up at Board 2 by Pachman. H. Kestler and Dieter Mohrlok heid down Boards 3 and 4 respectively, while P. Ostermeyer and K. Wockenfuss were Possibly lacking confidence in the lower nalf of the team, both Unzicker and Pachman played the entire schedule of 13 games. Unzicker's best performance was bis second-round defeat f Finland's Heikki Westerinen.

Defending Champions Reach Finals in Reisinger Match

Special to The New York Time

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 28-The defending champions were among the 15 teams centesting the final two sessions of the Reisinger board-a-match team championship at the American Contract Bridge League's Fall Nationals here this afternoon, but only after two narrow escapes from elimination.

Ira Rubin of Paramus, N.J.: Erik Paulson of Los Angeles and Hugh Ross of Cakland, Calif., who won the world team title earlier this year, won a split tie to reach the semifinal and barely qualified again last night. Their fourth wen, playing as a partner to the formidable Rubin for the first time in a iational team chan Altman of Tenafly, N.J.

By the end of the first session of the final, the Rubin team was almost 31/4 boards behind the leaders, a team headed by Malcolm Brachman of Dallas, which had 30.9 boards. Brachman was

Carl Hudecek, Toledo. Ohio; Dave Bondy, Swanton. Ohio, and Joho Bucheister. Warren, Mich., 32.4; Sam Stayman and Matt Granovetter, New York; Steve Parker, Gaithersburg, Md., and Bob Lipsitz, Potomac, Md., 32.3.

Two other top-ranked teams failed to reach the final. George Rapee of New York, a former world champion, was teamed with Bill Grieve and John Solodar of New York, and Eric Murray and Sam Kehela of Toronto. They missed by less than one board after a fighting recovery from a bad after-noon session. Mike Becker and Ron Tubin, both of New York, I'll Root of Boca Raton, Fla., and Richard Pavlicek of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., also failed to make the cut.

One of the best defensive efforts the week was contrived on the diagramed deal by Pavlicek and Root, a former New Yorker. At both tables, South landed in five hearts. In the diagramed auction, West took advan-tage of the favorable vulnerability to open four clubs, and his partner raised to five clubs over North's takeout West led the diamond eight, hoping Pavlicek again played high-low, showing exactly three trumps in standard procedure. The declarer next led another spade from dummy, and Root put up his ace to reach this position:

Root now had an accurate picture of the complete position. He knew that he could give his partner a spade ruff, and he knew that he could give him a diamond ruff. But he also knew that either play would be wrong. Instead, he led the club ace, forcing dummy to ruff. Whatever South did next, West

Don't Bury the Family

HERE TO STAY. American Families in the Twentieth Century. By Mary Jo Bane. 195 pages. Illustrated with tables. Basic. $11.50.

Occasionally we worry about who will look after the children - or if there will even be any children-in that inevitable future when the institution of the American family is finally interred. But that's all that remains to be settled, what with the increasing impermanence of things, what with declining births and rising divorces, what with the further recession into the past of the dear old days when Grandma and Uocle and Cousin all lived happily together under one roof, what, io short, with the death of the family. Only details remain to be mopped up.

Right? No, wrong, at least according to Mary Jo Bane, associate director of Center for Research on Women and assistant professor of education at Wellesley College. According to Professor Bane, the declining birth rate reflects the decreasing size of individual families, not an absolute decision by the population to give up having children. Although divorce rates have risen dramatically, most people remarry after divorcing, those who do not, tend to keep their children with them more than people used to, and, given the increase of life expectancy, families today are less often "disrupted" by the loss of a parent that they were a century ago.

Just a Myth

What's more, Professor Bane argues. "Recent historical studies show the myth of the extended family household to be just that—a myth. The nuclear family, consisting of parents living with their own children and no other adults, has been the predominant family form in America since the earliest period on which historians have data." In sum. "The facts—as opposed to the myths—about marriage, child rearing, and family ties in the United States today provide convincing evidence that family commitments are likely to persist in our society. Family ties, it seems clear, are not archaic remnants of a disappearing traditionalism, but persisting manifestations of human needs for stability, continuity, and nonconditional affection." The American family, as the title of her book declares, is "Here

Now all this may be reassuring to those of us who happen to enjoy family life and appalling to those who see the family as an obstacle to progress in equality of the sexes and its attendant benefits. But Professor Bane didn't write "Here to Stay" to appail or reassure. She recognizes that we in America are now committed to certain public values that appear to be at odds with the family's privacy—the most im-portant of these public values being sexual equality, to which she herself is clearly a committed devotee, as well as "equality of opportunity for children," by which she means the right of minors to be protected by adults and the right of children to economic sufficiency. (She is not splitting hairs here; she simply has several practical points in mind.)

If the persistence of the family is not taken into account, she goes on to argue, the way we act on our commitment to these public values could prove destructive. Thus, her main purpose in writing "Here to Stay" is not so much to prove that the family is alive and well, but instead to propose ways of implementing these public values in such a way as to acknowledge the family's continued viability. As she concludes, following a detailed examination of such issues as mandatory day care for all (which she opposes), the Equal Rights Amendment (which she favors), and Aid to Families with Oe-pendent Children (which she believes should be handled in the same way as unemployment compensation and Social Security):

"The tensions between family privacy and other values are to some extent resolvable by a public stance that emphasizes the rights of individuals and leaves family roles to be worked out privately. For example, the most workable approach to sexual equality is probably to enforce the political and economic rights of women, and to rely on families to work through the power shifts and changing division of labor that political and economic equality imply. The protection of children, a more complicated task because of children's inherent dependency, may be partially dealt with by emphasizing the individual rights of children and designing mechanisms for articulating

'Lifetime Insurance'

"Yet another kiod of tension, between family privacy and equal opportunities for children, may also he resolvable within an individualistic framework. Lifetime insurance—which would make individuals responsible not only for their old age but also for their own childhood care-is a mechanism for equalizing opportunity with minimal intrusion in family privacy. An insurance scheme to provide benefits to single-parent families would also try to reconcile aid to children and noninterference in adult lives by emphasizing the notion of marital disruption as an insurable risk."

As you can see, Professor Bane is a sober writer who throws words and ideas around as if she were building Stonehenge. But she brings to her study the authority she earned as one of the principal co-authors, along with Christopher Jencks, of the landmark study "Inequality: A Reassessment of the Effect of Family and Schooling in America." And "Here to Stay" packs a powerful punch because its author has stuck to quantitative data, which, while they "allow for little psychological interpretation of the sort that has recently become fashionable," nevertheless "have the advantage of being reasonably straightforward and trustworthy." One hopes that it will be read widely and taken with the utmost seri-

Grandma Moses didn't start painting until she was 78, Frank Lloyd Wright began the most prolific part of his career at the age of 69, and Dame Edith Evans appeared in her first film at age 60. These people and thousands of others have proven that older people can be as active and accomplished as anyone else. If you're an older person, read A GOOD AGE and learn how you can enrich your life. But, as Dr. Comfort says, "This book is not only for the now old. All people, of all ages, need the basic lacts. Those now old need positive strategies. Those not yet called old need to realize what is in store for them if they let things ride."

Comfort is angry, and he offers a lot of practical advice about how to resist destructive social pressures, explodes many myths and explains the biology of aging in clear, elegant and pungent language."

"A GOOD AGE has the same size, feel and illustrated mini-encyclopedia format as the author's last two manuals, The Joy of Sex and More Joy of Sex... Clearly intent on consciousness raising among the elderly, Comfort urges those over 65 to take no gull accut their age...All the elderly really need, says Comfort, is a better shake from sacret, -and more bloody-mindedness."

Imperative For Rhodesia

The evident agreement on a deadline date for Rhodesia's legal independence under African majority rule is a significant hreakthrough for the mooth-long negotiation in Geneva. At the showdown, the two most intransigent of the four African political leaders-undoubtedly under pressure from the hlack governments bordering Rhodesia-accepted with minor amendments a British proposal fixing March 1, 1978, as the "latest date' for the formal hirth of the nation that will he called Zimbabwe.

When the obstacles still to he overcome in negotiations between mutually suspicious African leaders and Rhodesia's white minority Government are taken into account, however, it is obvious that the welcome agreement oo an independence date is no occasion for euphoria. Still to be bammered out are agreements on the structure of an interim government, including the touchy issue of who shall control security and law enforcement, the creation of machinery for writing and adopting a constitution, and the preparation and bolding of free elections.

While the leaders wrangle in Geneva, the armed struggle escalates in Rhodesia, with each attack on white outposts hy hlack guerrillas and each white Rhodesian foray into Mozambique making the peace negotiation more difficult and increasing the risks of greater outside intervention. Extremists in both camps-hlack guerrilla commanders and some among Rhodesia's 270,000 whites -hope fervently for failure at Geneva. There are doubts that Robert Mugahe, the most demanding of the African negotiators, actually speaks for the guerrilla commanders.

In the circumstances it seems clear that if the negotiations for a peaceful transition in Rhodesia are to have any chance, Britain, as the recognized legal power in that country, must play a much greater role than Prime Minister Callaghan's Government is yet ready to assume. This may seem unfair in light of the fact that Britain was hearish about Secretary Kissinger's eleventh-hour intervention which brought about the Geneva talks and has remained highly skeptical that the negotiation could

Now that the Geneva effort has been launched, however, it would be tragic if it collapsed. In that event only a miracle could arrest the drift toward racial war in the southern African subcontinent, with beavy risks of eventual great-power confrontation. It is entirely clear that on their own the hlack leaders and the white minority regime cannot negotiate a peaceful settlement. Only Britain is in position to engineer the necessary compromises and exert the required pressures on the scene.

To hold the ring in this situation is not an assignment any government would relish. Least of all a British administration without a working majority in Parliament that is trying desperately to stabilize its currency and revive its economy while coping with sectarian strife in Northern Ireland and separatism in Scotland. If it is to play this role for the sake of peace and stability in southern Africa, Britain will deserve all the belp it can get-from the "frontline" black leaders, from South Africa's white Government, and from the United States, which had so much to do with landing Britain in its uncomfortable Geneva assignment.

To Save the Ozone

Two reports out of Washington indicate that the Government is taking seriously the possibility that chlorofluorocarbon propellants-used io some, hut by no mean all, spray cans-are a threat to public health and the integrity of the global environment.

The Food and Drug Administration proposes that such cans containing products under its jurisdictioo carry a label warning consumers of the harm the chemical may do in reducing ozone in the upper atmosphere-a protective layer that sluelds the earth from ultraviolet radiation. This would be the first step toward an outright ban, At the same time, the Consumer Product Safety Commission is moving toward a curb on the use of these propellants for products under its jurisdiction.

Neither step will result in an immediate suspension of the propellant gas in question, which the National Academy of Sciences has found can deplete the ozone enough to increase significantly the incidence of skin cancer and perhaps alter the climate enough to affect agriculture in some parts of the world. The F.D.A.'s proposal and any outright ban can only hecome binding after a period of comment and dehate by interested parties, which may take many months.

This prospect of delay makes the action of the two agencies completely compatible with the recommendation of the Academy. That body has suggested that while the rate of ozone depletion is slow enough to make a two-year delay tolerable, that might well be the limit. It should likewise allow manufacturers time enough to find satisfactory alternative propellants. Some are already far along in the process.

The case for these initial actions could hardly he put more convincingly than it was by Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt, the Commissioner of Food and Drugs: "a simple case of negligible benefit measured against possible catastrophic risk." The Commissioner was equally to the point in urging similar steps by other nations.

The earth's ozone layer cannot he saved hy any action of a single government so long as other societies keep shooting the same offensive chemicals into the atmnsphere. The need for international agreement on a curh is one more proof of the oneness of the world and the common vulnerability of all its people.

Feeble Watchdog

The jubilation of Federal officials over the agreement by trustees of the Teamsters Union's higgest pension fund to negotlate an "undertaking with respect to management of the fund and its assets" is difficult

On the record to date, the Government has been making a mess of administering its policing responsibilities under the pension reform law signed with great fanfare by President Ford two years ago. Now, instead of insisting on full compliance with the fiduciary ohligations mandated by that law, the authorities appear to be letting the trustees of this grossly mismanaged fund, with its $1.4 billion in assets and $300 million a year in new collections, tell them how far they are willing to go toward meeting the requirements of the law.

Unquestionably, it was a mistake for the Internal Revenue Service to revoke the fund's tax-exempt status last June with no apparent consideration for the havoc that enforcement of such an order would inflict. Had the order not been stayed, it would have had a disastrous effect on the future security of the nearly 400,000 union members the pension plan is supposed to protect and on the solvency of the 18,000 employers who contribute up to $25 a week in payments for each worker. But the misguided nature of a penalty, which hit everybody except the true culprits, left unchanged the LR.S. finding that abuses of law existed in the administration of the fund.

It is true that the fund's able young executive director, Daniel J. Shannon, has used the threat of resignation to hludgeon its union and management trustees into some constructive reforms, notably a cutoff in the investment of huge sums in high-risk real estate under gangster control. The hoard of trustees bas been reconstituted, hut anti-racketeer elements in the union insist the changes so far have been more cosmetic than suh-

Federal auditors have heen studying the fund's books for many months. Lawyers for the Government and for the fund have been negotiating all through the process. To announce as a significant accomplishment at this late date that the trustees are willing to negotiate, in exchange for another ninety-day deferment of the tax order, can only revive public concern that another sordid political deal is in the making.

The hest antidote for such concern is a frank explanation hy the authorities of the ground rules governing the projected negotiations, plus an assurance that they will involve no hargaining for forgiveness of past illegal acts. No one has yet made clear in any event why Federal receivership would not represent a more cleancut way to guarantee a thorough cleanup.

Polarization in France

"In the end there will be nothing left hut the Communists and ourselves," one of President de Gaulle's closest aides ooce wrote of the General's electoral strategy, designed to destroy the traditional ceoter parties and assure victory by confronting French voters with a choice of Communists or Gaullists.

Seven years after de Gaulle's departure from office, his polarization of French politics continues. The attempt by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to reverse this trend and restore an important center bloc has just suffered a serious setback in seven key National Assembly by-elections.

The elections saw the Communist-Socialist Union of the Left and the Gaullists both score significant successes. The chief loser has been Mr. Giscard d'Estaing and his effort to recoostitute the vital center of French

The reviving fortunes of the fading Gaullist party promises increasing difficulties for the French President in managing his divided Gaullist-conservative-center coalition. The Gaullists still hold a hig majority of the seats controlled by Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's Government in the National Assembly, which was elected in 1973. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing won the Presidency in 1974 hy defeating a Gaullist candidate in the first round with the aid of a large Gaullist faction led by Jacques Chiracwhom he later named Premier. But his youthful, modern style and his reformist programs have enabled him neither to expand his own Independent Republican Party nor to cement a more permanent merger with the Chirac Gaullists and the center parties. On the contrary, Mr. Chirac succeeded in reuniting the Gaullist Party under bis own leadership, then resigned the premiership last summer to revitalize it for the 1978 parliamentary elections and, presumably, for an attempt to unseat Mr. Giscard d'Estaing in the 1981 Presidential elections.

Mr. Chirac quit the premiership over Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's refusal to return to polarization tactics. He wanted to start campaigning for the approaching municipal elections on hard, nationalist lines focused on the Communist danger. The French President's strategy, hased on a low-keyed posture and progressive programs, has been to woo center-left elements with the hope ultimately of attracting moderate Socialists, splitting the Communist-Socialist Left Union and blunting the Left's increasingly successful power drive.

Instead, Socialist fidelity to the alliance with the Communists has been strengthened by electoral gains and public opinion polls that indicate a tripling of the Socialist vote to 30 percent, while the Communists have slipped slightly to about 20 percent of the national total.

These trends have now been confirmed by this month's seven hy-elections, in the midst of recession, inflation, high unemployment and unpopular austerity measures. Mr. Chirac and Gaullist polarization politics have heen strengthened. President Giscard d'Estaing, weakened, faces loss of authority and increased divisions in his coalition. The 6 percent swing to the left that was registered, if repeated in the next general election, would promise Communist-Socialist control of Parliament and the Government. A constitutional struggle with President Giscard d'Estaing would be the likely outcome, reviving past political instabilities and even, perhaps, endangering democracy in France.

Oil Price: The Fruitless Recriminations 'Misused' Tax Data

To the Editor:

With the approaching deadline for a crucial decision on the future price of oil, both the oil exporters and consumers are making ill-conceived claims and statements of dubious value.

It is senseless for Iran to ask for a 15 percent price increase of oil hecause of inflation when a meticulous study by the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation has shown that the composite cost of OPEC imports has risen by a practically negligible 2.8 percent since the last price increase about sixteen months ago, an amount easily covered by a small fraction of OPEC's surpluses, and when the general price index in the United States has risen by 87 percent since 1967 while during the same period the price of oil has been lifted by more than 400 percent, admittedly from a depressed

It is ironical for OPEC members to assume the role of champions of the poor developing countries when the excessive price of oil is pushing them toward unbearable iodebtedness and extreme poverty, and wheo per-capita income of some oil countries becomes 100 times higher than that of their poorer neighbors. Is this in the spirit of the much-heralded new economic order and of the need for a more equitable distribution of wealth?

It is an exaggeration for oil exporters to complain bitterly about alleged exploitation and outright robbery in the past by Western oil companies without whose initiative and skill in discovering, harnessing and marketing oil many ultrarich countries would have remained among the poorest in the world.

It is damaging and unfair for some of our columnists and a segment of our public to vent their auti-Arab prejudice by blaming "greedy sheiks" and "Arab blackmail" for energy-related difficulties when it is Iran and Venezuela, not the Arabs, which are pushing the price of oil higher and higher while Saudi Arabia is the voice of restraint and moderation.

It is almost ludicrous for our economists to issue statements that a 71/2 percent price increase of oil may be justified and 10 to 15 percent could be made manageable by application of appropriate policies, apparently by extending huge additional credits at a time when the inflated credit system already shows signs of bursting.

It is ill advised for our politicians to talk about possible embargoes and economic or military retaliation instead of stressing the worldwide devastating effects of any further price increase, and emphasizing the great community of interest between oil exporters and their economically advanced customers.

What is urgently needed now rather than fruitless mutual recriminations — is a friendly, businesslike dialogue with full consideration of everyone's legitimate requirements.

Lame-Duck Junkets

To the Editor:

Much has been written deploring the apathy and disillusionment of young people concerning our elected officials. I am not a young person, but I am appalled by the note in The Times of Nov. 18 that Representative Randall is on a sixteen-day tour, Representative Hutchinson is on a tour and Representative Morgan is on an eighteenday tour of the Far East, all at Government expense.

They are all lame-duck Congressmen. Are they such experts in their fields that reports will be written on their findings, and acted upon? Are their wives members of these so-called fact-finding tours? Are their secretaries, or members of their families, or members of their staffs on these fact-finding tours?

WASHINGTON-For sudden illumination of the transition charade now going on, cast your mind back to the

Charade Rest

Democratic Convention last summer. Remember how Jimmy Carter was laboriously, suspensefully coming toward a "final decision" on a running mate? How the names of five finalists were floated out, and dope stories appeared about Senators Muskie, Glenn, and the others, all of whom installed private telephones in their suites to be ready to receive the news of the "decision" that was presumably still being made?

The charade was played throughout that week, providing spice and news value to an otherwise cut-and-dried convention, thus suiting the needs of the press. It also showed the man at the center to be firmly in charge of decisions, suiting the candidate's public-image needs.

At convention's end, a questioner at a press conference-prompted, perhaps, hy a column suggesting that the dramatic "decision-making process" was a bit of flim-flam-asked the candidate if he had come to the convention city with his Vice Presidential choice already in mind. With engaging candor, Mr. Carter allowed as how he had not changed his mind about a running mate during the week of the convention.

The same charade is being played out now. The Great Talent Hunt that is supposedly going on is satisfying everybody's needs. The press is happy hecause all speculation is fair and largely accurate, reflecting the "lists" that are being circulated around Washington for various posts. Even those scribes to whom a list has not heen vouchsafed can confidently murmur "Jordan is in." secure in the knowledge that Barhara Jordan, Vernon Jordan, or Hamiltoo Jordan will wind up somewhere on top.

The remark could also he justified as Carter support for the Jordan River as the Israeli defense line, if onlythis time-he can find a self-hating Arah to be Secretary of State.

The people whose names are mentioned by the Great Mentioner are happy beause it is flattering for many to be publicized as "seriously considered" for a Cabinet post.

The public is happy because musical chairs is an enjoyable game, and many people think that their reaction to "trial halloons" is a part of the mysterious process called decision-making. Such guessing and winking is far more fun than looking over the existing President's shoulder as he prepares the hudget, or compiles tedious analyses of campaign promises made by the President-to-he.

The "new-boy network" of foundationiks and Kissinger castoffs is happy because it can churn out loads of position papers, and prattle about "options" and "priorities"-as if the appointees who will come in over them bave no idea of the problems ahead or have no policy plans of their own.

Most important, the President-elect is happy hecause (I) he can he portrayed as soberly cautious and deliberate in making his decisions; (2) he can pay off a great many debts by just "considering" someone publicly, and (3) he can show himself to be at the center of real power in Washington without having to take up any of the reins of power, gaining the appearance of authority without the concomitant responsibility.

As we all enjoy ourselves in our particular ways, let us not delude ourselves into thinking the charade is the actual state of affairs, Jimmy Carter has been running for President for over two years. After a month of postelection reflection, surely he has made at least 80 percent of his Cabinet choices. It would be totally out of character for him not to have decided hy now on nearly all of his aides.

The trees have already fallen in Mr. Caner's forest, although we have not vet heen permitted to hear the sound. As in his pre-convention choice of Mr. Mondale, the man who has made the decisions sees a value in pretending to be deliberating still; the honeymoon is prolonged, the drama is intensified, the power accrues.

Nothing terribly wrong with this, provided we see the difference between the public "Talent Inventory Process" and the actual deciding, between our involvement in a public-relations talent hunt and his cool, privaterelations shot-calling. We can observe the carefully orchestrated minuet without becoming cynics, or even dance in it without hecoming hypocrites, as long as we recognize that most of the tune has been written and the steps choreographed.

Will Mr. Carter come up with a "Ministry of All the Talents" such as ruled England after the death of William Pitt-an array of ministerial stars that starts out to great applause hut soon falls to power-struggling? Or will he construct a Cabinet of Compatibility, a balanced ticket of cronies and safe choices that can eventually be managed by a coolly competent White House staff?

One is tempted to conclude "nohody knows." But that is a misreadiog of reality. Somehody already does know. With mock wrinkles in his brow, with needless resumés in his looseleaf binder, with the substitution of the new "outreach" for the old "input," the man who already knows serves his image-making purpose by treating us all to the extended titiliations of

Lapdogs No More

By Thomas Franck and Edward Weisband

Since 1973, the Constitution's "invitation to struggle" has turned into a nasty war between Congress and President for control of foreign relations. The war has consisted chiefly of Congress' undoing Executive initiatives. It is difficult for foreign nations -friends as well as enemies-to relate to a superpower which fitfully zigzags its way through the course of human events while various aspiring captains are seen to grapple for control of toe President-elect Carter has stated that a cease-fire with Congress is a top priority. But how?

One veteran of the war, former Senator J. William Fulbright, says that it will happen naturally. "After Carter takes over, the Democratic leadership will all revert to being the President's lapdogs."

We disagree. During the past four years of Presidential eclipse, Congressmen and Senators have developed a taste for the long-forhidden fruit of foreign relations. They have learned that foreign-policy initiatives—once considered politically unrewarding-now attract media attention and popular recognition. In particular, any Secretary of State appointed by Mr. Carter will soon encounter Senator Frank Church, slated to chair the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after Senator John Sparkman retires in two years. A recognized foreign-policy virtuoso-and a rejected sustor for Mr. Carter's Vice Presidency -Mr. Church will make an uneasy second fiddler.

Nor should the President-elect count too heavily on party loyalty. The Congress is normally the Presidency's official opposition. There tends to be closer affinity between Republicans and Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee than between a President and Senators of his own party. Among the most tenacious foreignpolicy critics during the Nixon-Ford Administration were the ranking committee Republicans, Senators Clifford Case and Jacob Javits. Further militating against any slide back into the past is the recent rapid growth of a Congressional foreign policy bureaucracy. Congress, in the last five years, has developed a virtual counter-State Department composed of predominantly young, experienced and aggressive experts who are out to make their own marks on the foreign policy map. Supporting them is a new matrix of laws that institutionalize Congressional activism. This loes not necessarily mean that Congress will he as beligerant to Mr. Carter as to Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. There will be the traditional "honeymoon" and Mr. Carter will not be cursed with the unoriginal sins of Vietnam, Watergate or the C.I.A. Most important, Mr. Carter's outlook balances old elitist with newer populist proclivities. Like Henry Kissinger, he may sometimes worry about a Congress where, in Rousseau's words, "all men constantly wish the happiness of each but there is no one who does not take that word 'each' to pertain to himself." But, unlike Mr. Kissinger, he will understand that a foreign policy is more likely to succeed if it is conceived in toe cacophony of full Congressional participation.

A new relationship, however, requires more than empathetic proclivities. It must begin with a total restructuring of the Congressional-Executive mesh. During the Nixon and Ford years, relations with Congress proceeded primarily via two channels: Mr. Kissinger and a few liaison professionals. It didn't work well because everyone on the Hill ignored the powerless messengers and demanded the all-powerful Secretary. Denied, they felt insulted rather than consulted.

This time around, the Executive must open more levels of communica-

By recently voting itself a large new foreign policy bureaucracy, Congress has coincidentally opened new entry points. A State Department desk officer can now find foreign relations specialists on the personal staffs of many Senators, the staffs of numerous House and Senate committees and subcommittees, the General Accounting Office and even in the office of the legislative counsel. They wield influence and, unlike most Congressmen, have the attention span to facilitate effective dialogue with midecheloo Foggy Bottom counterparts.

Mr. Rissinger expressly vetoed a proposal to encourage midechelon contacts, fearing loss of control if a hundred flowers were to bloom. Yet be failed to stop the malcontents' taking their appeals to Congress: few Secretaries bave come closer to losing control over their departments.

Instead of discouraging bureaucratic network-building across the chasmthat marks the separation of powers, such activity should now be encouraged and openly conducted, for it can dampen incioient conflicts and make policy choices less intensely adversary.

APRIL IN PARIS, OR A DAY AT THE HOSPITAL. $450.

That could be the price by 1980. If the present trends continue, some hospital stays in the Greater New York area could cost an average of $450 a day by 1980. Certain hospital stays in Manhattan already cost $300 a day.

And you can get a packaged week-long trip to Paris for little more:

What is Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York doing about it? We have a number of programs to belp hospitals to altain higher levels of efficiency and contain costs. But another thing we can do is to save that room charge by treating people on an out-patient basis. Such as "Ambulatory Surgery", where a patient has minor surgery and goes home the same day. For several years now, we've paid more claims for out-patients than in-patients. Many of our out-patient benefits were among the first in the country. And remain among the best.

So we not only save room cost, but patients can lead more normal lives at bome. How home care saves hospital dollars. Since 1960 we've been showing the whole country how home care benefits can save money and make patients happier. Under our program, a patient can leave the hospital earlier and recuperate at home. Patients get all the medication, equipment, and nursing they need. And they feel better because they're at home with their family and friends.

Getting second opinions on surgery: two heads may be cheaper than one. Would a second specialist's opinion on ' elective surgery reduce the number of unnecessary operations?

A study cited by Congress indicates it might: board-certified specialists disagreed 17.6% of the time with the original opinion. Thus, while we're not prejudging the results, we're now making second surgical opinion available to "experiencerated" groups as an added benefit.

Subscribers in these groups can get an opinion on elective surgery from a second specialist at no cost to themselves.

We are hopeful that this program will save surgery, money, and hospital use while improving the quality of health care.

The home "kidney machine" saves lives and saves money. We were the first Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan in the country to offer the new home hemodialysis equipment as one of our benefits.

Since 1972, we have made out-patient hemodialysis treatment plus actual in-home dialysis equipment available as one of our benefits. Kidney sufferers whose conditions are stabilized can now lead nearly normal lives.

And each of them can save about $20,000 a year as well.

Be informed. We need your help. We want you to become interested and informed. Learn what new cost-containment programs are heing proposed. Think them over. We need the support of every citizen in our work toward cost containment.

We believe there's more to good health than just paying bills.

The Legacy of Bull Connor

That vague yearning for respectability may be all that is left of the legacy of Bull Conner, now deceased. Racially, Birmingham is now indistinguishable from, say, Dayton, Ohio.

The image of racial intransigence, however dated, still heuris the city, and because its major industry is steel, it has also been regarded as something of a southern fried Pittsburgh.

But—in no small measure because of the efforts of Mrs. David H. Roberts, the wife of a coal miner owner and the city's prime mover in the arts-the old image is giving way to a new one: Birmingham as a leading Southern ceoter for the arts, the chief competitor to Atlanta.

Coinciding with the signing of the new Agam piece, the city's 17-year-old museum conducted the largest show of his work ever presented in the United States.

"It's really astonishing when you realize that 25 years ago, there was not even a museum here," said John Farmer, the young director of the Bir-mingham Museum. "No museum and no collectors."

While the Agam show was going on, exhibits featuring various artists opened on the same day at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, Birmingham Southern, Samford University, the Jemison and Altamont gallerles and several smaller galleries. The Birmingbam Arts Alliance was holding a jury show and there were exhibits at city bospitals, which have continuous displays, usually the work of local artists. Birmingham's business and financial community is also deeply in-volved in collecting and displaying art.

Supporting Arts Is 'With It'

"Well, of course, there is an awful lot of money coming in here." Mrs. Roberts said, "and a realization that there is a limit to how much one can expend on furs and Cadillacs, and that if you don't support the arts, well, you

The connection between art and racial turmoil is curious, but in Birmingbam it seems more than tenuous.

"I feel the ferment in the arts here is a backlash of the civil rights movement," said Dr. Alston Callahan, a re-nowned eye surgeon who founded the Eye Foundation Hospital and the man who commissioned the $43,000 Agam work, paid for by gifts of three prominent Birmingham businessmen. "We had such a terrible image," he continued. "We had to do something about it. We got rid of Bull Coonor and then people began to pay their civic dues; it was a compensation. Of Birmingham's several flourishing galleries, the most conspicuously suc-cessful is one called "The Little House on Linden Street," which until a few years ago was just that, a single small frame house. Now it occupies three buildings, filled floor to ceiling with works that range from modest pieces by local and regional artists to those bearing the signatures of Dali, Miro, Chagall, Rouault.

The proprietor, Gene Smith, who said that he had been named after Bull Coonor, puts special effort into promot-ing young local artists. His three current favorites are all graduates of the University of Alahama, all in their mid20's and all from small towns in Alabama. They are Frank Fleming from Bear Creek, Nall Hollis from Arab and Bill Nance from Ensley.

Mr. Hollis, who works primarily in pen and ink and signs himself simply "Nall", recently had a very successful show in Nice, France, Mr. Nance, who works often in castoff materials for his "constructions," leaches at Alabama A & M at Huntsville.

"But I think if you hear of any young Southern artist in the next few years, it will be Frank Fleming," Mr. Smith said. Mr. Fleming, who works almost exclusively in unadorned white porcelain, creates whimsical pieces that duplicate the texture of lace, leather, brick or other materials.

Little Struggle in Career

Her Hollywood career, which hegan in the early 1930's, was a highly successful one, almost completely devoid of the usual tales of struggling-young-actress finally-makes-good.

After several straight dramatic roles Miss Russell emerged as one of the films most expert comedians with her appearance, lo 1939, in "The Women," which she played the vacuous and vicious --but extremely funny gossip---Sylvia

She came to look upon that success with mixed feelings in later years, how-ever, for it led to her being typecast. "By 1951," she said, "I had grown weary of pleying the eteroal, successful career woman in films. I had played that role

From all accounts, Miss Russell's tireless energy went hack to her childhood in Waterbury, Conn., where she was born. Her father, James Edward Russell, a successful trial lawyer who bad worked his the turgid film version of O'Neill's way up through the Yale Law School, and "Mourning Becomes Electra." her mother, the former Clara McKnight, named Rosalind, the fourth of their seven children, after a steamship oo which they had traveled to Nova Scotia oo a wedding

Miss Russell was brought up in a pleasant, well-staffed 13-room Victorian house, and she attended a Roman Catholic academy before enrolling at Marymount college at Tarrytown, N. Y. Miss Russell was noticed in that film role particularly by Frederick Brisson, a Danish-born theatrical agent who saw "The Women" on a ship crossing the At-lantic in 1939. In Hollywood, he was the house guest of Cary Grant, who was then co-starring with Miss Russell in 'His Girl Friday," a remake of Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur's "The Front Page," and Mr. Brisson asked to he introduced to the actress.

Mr. Grant was best man at the couple's wedding in 1941.

Miss Russell's heyday years in Holly-wood were io the late 1930's and 40's Among her successes were 'No Time for Comedy," "Take a Letter, Darling" and 'My Sister Eileen.'

But also, by her own admission, "there were plenty of duds aloog the way, as I played the same role over and over—the over-tailored, padded-shouldered, pompa-doured, funny-hatted, sleek and tough career woman with the flip lines and the flinty heart that somehow melts in the clutches of the man I needed all the time —in the last reel, of course."

Among the flops were "The Velvet Fouch," "Tell it to the Judge" and "Woman of Distinction." Also less than successful were some of the roles Miss. When Mame came into Miss Russell's County Medical Society, the Medical Society Russell assayed in an effort to shake her life, the actress was still soignée and ciety of the State of New York and the type-casting as a comedian, such as those In "The Guilt of Janet Ames" ("I rarely mention it except in an inaudible whisper," she said) and 'The Casino Murder Case" ("I doo't eveo mention it in a whis-

Armenian Tapestries Presented to City

The Armenian community in the United States said, "Thank you, America, thank you, New York" yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel by giving New York City a collection of 21 tapestries depicting events in the city's history.

The tapestries, the work of Albert

Hercer, the American muralist, were accepted on behalf of the city by Mayor Beame. The tapestries will be cared for hy the Metropolitan Museum

The Armenian Sisters Academy in Radnor, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, received the tapestries from John Korenian of California. He had collected them over 20 years. The gift was disclosed in The New York Times in May. Since then, prominent Armenians from throughout the United States have contributed toward reducing the school's debt of $600,000, according to Set Momjian, a member of the academy's hoard of directors and the national chairman of the "Thank you, America" committee. The tapestries, which range from

Some Exceptions Noted

A comparison by borough of arrests for violent crimes in the first nine months of 1975 and 1976 for all age groups shows these exceptions to a general pattern of decline in violent crime:

At a time when the violent activities up in the 21-and-over age group. Assault attracted widespread attention, the num-ber of arrests for violent crimes by young people has tapered off.

In the Bronx, which has been the focus of attention because of juvenile crimes against the elderly, figures for 1976 show Police Department statistics for the first that robbery complaints are down by 2.9

Judge Williams believes that the recent for crimes against property—burglary, grand larceny and automobile theft—have climbed in all the boroughs and seem headed for record bighs this year.

The decline in arrests for juvenile violated the reality."

Judge Williams believes that the recent intense coverage by newspapers and television stations of crimes against the elderly by youngsters under 16 has some merit. But in the process, he asserts, "It's distorted the reality." Several Family Court judges inter-

Starting in February, when the so-called Juvenile Justice Reform Act goes into effect, Family Court judges will have the power to mandate a one-year sentence in a secure training school for a juvenile found to have committed murder, arson, or kidnapping. After that one-year term, the judge may impose a second year in a residential setting, to be followed by three years of probation. The law was the result of a comoromise legislative plan in the 1976 session. At the time, critics said the plan did not go far enough. Apparently, however, the word about the stricter sentencing is on

Sutton Says Drug Sellers Offer 'Brand Names' Openly on Street

Once the East Side, West Side melody was for tripping the light fantastic on the sidewalks of New York. Nowadays, the city music has a more bitter tune, according to Borough President Percy E. Sutton of Manhattan. Drug pushers, he says, are "singing out a litany of names of drugs for sale: just as though they were hawking fish from a fish wagon." They're openly pulling out of shopping hags decks of heroin to sell by brand oames, he says.

True-Blue, Bingo, Di-gel, Black Magic, Black Love, Clear Tape, Dick Down, Death Wish, Funk City, Light and Lively, Mean Machine, Blackout, Black Power, Blue Star, Bogard, Could-he-Fatal. Dynamite and Foolish Pleasure are some of the street offerings of drug sellers.

Testimony is Circulated

Mr. Sutton circulated testimony he had given this month to Representative Charles B. Rangel, Democrat of Manhattan and a member of the House Committee on Narcotics and Control. Mr. Sutton charged that "New York is a city being ahandoned to the users and pushers of drugs."

There are only 10 black city undercover narcotics agents working in upper Manhattan, Mr. Sutton asserted, although he quoted estimates by a special narcotics prosecutor, Sterling Johnson, that 75 percent of the city's drug sales occurred in Central Harlem.

There are only 10 black undercover agents employed by the Federal Government in the entire New York City and northern New Jersey area, Mr. Sutton added. White agents, he said, "have little success in penetrating the street activity of the Harlems of New York Čity."

Children Accompany Seller

Mr. Sutton said he had recently watched a "thoroughly drugged mother standing there, deep into her high, at the corner of 117th Street and Eighth Avenue, selling packets of drugs over the heads of her two children, neither of which could have been more than 5 years old."

The children's way of "learning to count," Mr. Sutton asserted, was "knowing that a packet of True-Blue sold for $5—thus two packets were $10 and three packets were $15." He quoted Mr. Johnson as having estimated that the average addict consumed $100 worth of heroin a day.

Long Island Composers' Alliance Presents Works of Five Members

very much a nondoctrinaire group. None of this music is going to move mountains its own, ranging from an easygoing neo-Romantic Cello Sonata by Avraham entitled "Jazz Images" by Herbert A.

In between these extremes came Elie Siegmeister's sprightly Clarinet Concerto. a more cooventional use of jazz idioms; Albert Tepper's sinewy Viola Sonata, formally traditional but leaning heavily on early Bartok in its harmonic orientation, and a rather ferociously gnarled, Lisztian Piano Sonata by Marga Richter.

The excellent performers, all members of Hofstra's music faculty, included Blanche Abram, Morton Estrin and Mr. Sternklar, piano; Olga Bloom, viola; Sey mour Benstock, cello: Naomi Drucker clarinet; and Mr. Deutsch, who managed to play both trumpet and piano simul-taoeously against the synthesized accompanement of his composition.

Mr. Hollander's approach worked well enough in Schumann's impulsive "Kreisleriana." Especially where it grew rapid and extroverted, the music flew by in fine style. There were also momeots of poetic iotrospection, but here the integrity of Schumann's rumioative melodies was schumann's ruminative melodies was marred by sudden eruptions of feeling. While Mr. Hollander's reading of Schubert's expansive Sooata in G major (Op. 78) was hardly as subjective, the long lines writhed to such a degree that the music's simplicity and stillness were underwined. Although Mr. Hollander's undermined. Although Mr. Hollander's affection for the work was obvious, his performance was the sort that supports the view that Schubert's "heavenly length" sonatas require more patience and self-effacement than a relatively young artist is likely to achieve.

Also on the program was Richard

Strauss's Sonata in B minor (Op. 5), a rapt, polished readings. Elsewhere, how-rarity in which the first movement pledges ever, the drama was somewhat stolid rarity in which the first movement pledges dogged allegiance to Beethoven's Fifth. Mr. Hollander's performance was idiomatic and imaginative. The feathery lightness he managed in the Scherzo was particularly impressive.

Gregg Smith Singers Excel at Concert

The sold-out sign was up at Alice Tully Hall Saturday night for the first concert of the season by the Gregg Smith Singers, and with good reason. This 16-voice mixed choir is among the finest profes- persons and injured 15 others may have

Judging from the healthy stylistic valong past the point of welcome return-riety of the compositions, the alliance is Mr. Smith chose works that never exceeded six minutes, and more often bovered around the three to four minute perhaps, but each piece had a definite mark. So carefully integrated were they self-confident and well-crafted profile of into the larger context, however, that there was no sense of fragmentation. Quite the contrary, in fact, the kaleido-Sternklar to a witty electronic confection scoping of moods and textures gave the evening a refreshing sense of momentum.

Of especial fascination was the centerpiece assortment of antiphonal music, all of it presented with theatrical flair. The choir members strolled up and down the aisles as they sang Orlando Gibbons's collage of London street cries; the Gloria from the Monteverdi "Magnificat" had the solo tenor on stage, the "echo" tenor out in the lobby, the chorus singing antiphhonally from the loges and Mr. Smith cooducting from a seat in the center of the house.

There were also two extraordinarily effective New York premieres: "Psalm XXII" by Edmund Najera (a member of the ensemble) and "Sound Canticle on Bay Psalm 73" by Mr. Smith himself. Both settings use Gregorian or bymn tunes as a basis for innovative, often hauntingly lovely explorations of spac-tial sonorities.

The choral performances were exemplary, the list of excellent soloists from within the ensemble including, but by no means limited to Thomas Bogdan, Linda loughby.

Fernand Koenig, Baritone, Makes New York Debut

Fernand Roenig, making his New York debut, sang Schubert's "Winterreise" Sunday afternoon at the 92d Street Y.M.-Y.W.H.A. The recital was a particularly felicitous Bicentennial salute from Luxembourg; Adrien Meisch, Mr. Koenig's pianist, happens to be Luxembourg's Ambassador to the United States.

Mr. Koenig clearly an artist of stature, sang very beautifully. His baritone is rich and pliable, his presence vivid and sympathetic. He was far less interested in dramatizing jodividual words than in broadly characterizing a given song or verse, but then Schubert's wanderer is a man of deep but relatively uncom-plicated feeling, and there is always a danger of overinterpreting his tale of unrequited love.

Mr. Koenig was most memorable in the quieter songs; "Der Wirthshaus" and "Die Nebensonneo" received particularly and unusually slow-paced.

The problem, in part, was Mr. Meisch. His subdued pianism, though never less than competent, failed to explore the remarkable range of color and mood encompassed by Schubert's simple accompaniments. Especially in the fleeter soogs, Mr. Koenig seemed in need of a more intense, energetic partner.

Trevor Griffiths's new play, 'Comedians," which opened last night at the Music Box Theater, is one of the funniest, and almost certainly the dirtiest, of comedies to be seen on Broadway in some seasons. It is comedy with an esthetic, moral and, above all, political pur-

You can, if you like, just go along and have a few belly laughs, admire sweetly coordinated ensemble of devoted actors, a most memorable and brilliant debut by an unknown actor, Jonathan Pryce, and an un-self-consciously dazzling staging ov Mike Nichols. Yet there is much more to "Comedians" than this superficial glance, and, surprisingly, also a little less. "Comedians" does not always deliver the depth charge of its messages, and it is Mr. Nichols's particular success with the play that has enabled it to work effortlessly on two levels of seriousness. For this is drama with a double standard, and Mr. Griffiths is brilliant at writing the play he was less interested in writing-the play about life, rather than the play, running concurrently, about comedv and politics, Mr. Griffiths, by the wey, is a Socialist, one presumes with a sense of humor.

"Comedians" Ostensibly about comedians. It is set in a night school in Manchester, and in a workingmen's club just down the road. The class at the night school teaches comedy—how to be a stand-up comic in a few painful lessons. The teacher is a retired comic himself. Once very successful, he never had the killer instinct to continue on to fame. You are not told this by the playwright, but I imagine he just did not have the will to make the transition from radio to television. Many North Country and Cockney comics fell by the wayside there. But note, I am already taking a character outside his time in the proscenium arch. This is because Mr. Griffiths makes us believe in his people. They wander on in a striking semblance of reality. Part of the reason for this is the play's shape. It starts at class. is a kind of graduation-a graduation by fire. The six aspirant comics have run the course, and tonight, watched by a London talent scout, they are going to do their routines in front of a live audience at a club. You see them at class, you watch them in performance and you hear the summing up by the agent/scout. Mr. Griffith has found himself a perfect form-or, at least a perfect form to discuss the weighty matter of comedy. Its function, purpose and reward.

Cross-breeding is an old and position, which, in more ways than one, might be called the science of mixing strains. Schubert's use of a folk song in the last movement of his "Trout" Quintet comes invariably to mind, hut such hybridization has been practiced by important composers in every era.

It cannot be argued, therefore,

against Federico Moreno Torroba's

"Fantasia Flamenca" that his attempt to mate the symphony orchestra with the flamenco guitar was a doomed project. But the work, which had its world premiere yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, failed in just about every way possible. Mario Escu-dero, the flamenco guitarist, played his part fluently while the American Symphony Orchestra under

Antonio de Almeida's direction

gave a sympathetic account of material so feeble that it needed alt

The score, in three movements,

made iotermittent attempts to weave the guitar's figurations into the musical fabric, but all too often

it fell back on the sterile device of letting the solo instrument and the orchestra alternate in rudimentary fashion. What ought to be possible in such a piece, at a bare minimum, is the capturing of an atmosphere or a mood, such as

Rodrigo achieves in his light-classic

masterwork, "Concierto de Aranjuez." Nothing like that happened

this time, and certainly nothing

He introduces us to his comedians carefully, even tantalizingly. They filter on one by one, baring their characters as competing wrestlers might bare their chests. Their teacher arrives and they play games-a warm-up for this first, possibly crucial, test before a live audience. The teacher is now a coach, testing his team. The agent arrives-he happens to be the teacher's worst friend-and it is clear that he has a quite different view of comedy.

The agent thinks comedy is a narcotic. The teacher thinks comedy is a stimulant. The agent believes comedy confirms. The teachbelieves comedy questions. And now Mr. Griffiths has got his play ioto conflict. A decent, worthy

The performance. For the second act the playwright quite shamelessly gives us five nightclub acts. Nothing less, but a great deal more, for each act, while funny in itself, offers a view not so much of comedy as of humanity. For the comedians have adapted their act, hurriedly, nervously, to what they imagine the agent will want. Others have remained true to their teacher's concept of comedy with its social purpose. Then there is a last, the maverick, Gethin Price, who calmly makes an outrageous, even disgusting, attack oo society—which is caustically brilliant but not

The agent's summing up is pre-dictable. The guys who get the contract are the guys who bought it, and iotractability brings its own blank reward. But it is Gethin's act that is important. This is a scene based on the classic clown Grock, who died in the 50's. He was a savage clown, a dark clown, a Brighella of a clowo. He was not Chaplin, whose anger was transmorgified by the exigencies of commerce, into pathos. Grock was different.

This part of the play is quite unpleasant, and shines like a dark diamond in an elegant toad's forehead. And this represents the po-litical roots of the play. At the end of the act (unlike Grock, who I think was apolitical merely abrasive) Gethin evokes "The Red Flag" and Socialism. Mr. Griffiths is apparently suggesting to world Socialists something less compromising or smug than social democracy. If you choose to disregard the politics you can just laugh at the jokes, savor the characters, and contemplate the difference be-tween a comedian and a comic, a Harry Langdon and a Bob Hope.

The evening is full of laughter. Thia is not entirely because of Mr. Griffiths'a script, although I am sure that if he ever needs to work at Las Vegas or Gomorrah—I say nothing of Sodom—he will find gorgeous employment. He can twist old jokes into life, which is the test of survival. But much of the fun comes from Mr. Nichols's oiled and electric (it doesn't short-circuit) staging and the stylish actors. They amuse. More importantly they convince. You feel that any of them could go out there and do a routine. And Milo O'Shea's wry, embittered, hopeful comic guru, with a drooping black mustache and his gallant nonconformity showing like a slip,

But the outstanding performance is by Jooathan Pryce as Gethin. I saw him in London last summer in 'The White Devil' with Glenda Jackson, and he seemed to be an unnatural force of nature. As Gethin, his manic, hysteric, narrowly controlled performance is extraordinary. He created the role when the play was first done at the Nottingham Playhouse, and repeated it with Britain's National Theater. He stalks through the night like a man possessed and partly possessed of the play. Doo't miss him or the play.

The American Symphony Bach Works Teams Up With Guitarist Are Played By Newman

By PETER G. DAVIS

Anthony Newman's singular proach to Baroque style in general and Bach in particular has been stirring up audiences for some time. Perhaps we are just getting accustomed to Mr. Newman's ideas or he is, as he says, mellowing, but his first concert of four devoted to Bach's keyboard concertos at Tully Hall yesterday afternoon was so stylish and impeccably played it could hardly have offended any-

For this opening program Mr. Newman performed a pair of concertos for two harpsichords, in C, BWV 1061 (with Edward Brewer) and in C minor, BWV 1062 with his wife, Mary Jane Newman); the solo concerto No. 1 in D minor and, for a touch of variety, the Trio Sonata in C for Two Violins and Continuo (with Yuval Wald-man and Ruth Waterman, violins, and Frederick Zlotkin, cello). On the whole, the performances were propulsive and crisply articulated but never tense or overdriven. Mr. Newman likes to use a generous amount of ornamentation and rubato effect, almost all of which sounds convincing or at least defensible. His use of rubato as a structural device is particularly subtle-tiny pauses at various key spots to isolate and define vertical blocks within a phrase. This is a very tricky procedure, but Mr. Newman has managed to incorporate it naturally into what has alwaya been a formidable keyboard technique. Instead of an intermissioo, Mr. Newman and his colleagues asked the audience to listen to more music, and few people declined the invitation. This unscheduled bonus included a violio sonata by Vivaldi, two movements from a Bach viola da gamba sonata and two fugues from the same composer's "The Art of the Fugue."

Antonio de Almeida Progrom possed without exciting much interest.

enca," the guitar was given microphonic aid.

Mr. de Almeida's program passed without exciting much interest. After a pop-concert beginning with Herold's rackety "Zampa" Overture and Chausson's flinisy symphonic poem "Viviane," he filled the second half of the concert with a flaccid account of Berlioz's "Sym-phonie Fantastique." Unable to command precision or vitality from the musicians, the conductor missed whatever charm lay in the lighter pieces and simply beat

Andre Watts Gives a Stunning Piano Recital

By RAYMOND ERICSON

Andre Watts's recital in Avery Fisher Hall yesterday afternoon was a demonstration of why the pianist has been asked back each wear for the last 10 years to play in the Great Performers Series preseoted by Lincoln Center. He offered two hours of stunning pianism finet was full of brilliant virtuoso turns yet was always more than just that. He has a mind of his own about the music he plays and a personal magnetism that helps him communicate with his listeners.

The major work in the program was the Liszt Sonata. Like any piece of substance, it can be treated in a variety of ways that are persuasive if the performer has the right interpretive power. Mr. Watts provided a very tightly organized reading. It had its broader, theatrically inflected passages and tome enquisite moments, but for the most part the planist whipped through the music, holding it in taut suspension. His ability to get around the piano accurately at extraordinary speed made this possible. He took the fugal section at what seemed like an impossibly fast tempo yet did so without a fumble or without having to slow down. The tension in the performance gripped the listener and made the work seem

Mr. Watts prefaced the sonata with Liszt's "Les Jeux d'eaux à la Villa d'Este." which he made a iour de force of subtly graded pastel colors. Later there was Rachmaninoff's virtuosic Variations on a Theme by Corelli. This succeeds only with the kind of technical equipment that Mr. Watts has. He tossed off the frendishly difficult variations with the apparent ease and excitement in the phrasing that were associated with Rachmaninoff's own playing. And the slow sections were meltingly beautiful.

The pianist, who has expressed a growing interest in Schubert's music, played four of the "Moments musicaux." These he gave an ingratiatingly gentle quality, but they needed more flexibility of statement, a more positive lyricism. The popular No. 3 in F minor came off best, with its perky humor lightly cooveyed.

Mr. Watts ended the program with his own version of Gershwm's "Rhapsody in Blue." It was a very personal performance as the pianist toyed with the familiar rhythms and melodies. It was extremely clever, involving as well some hairraising technical feats. Quite justifiably, it brought the house down.

The recital was televised live on WNET/Channel I3 and carried in stereo simulcast by WQXR-FM. For those in the ball it was noteworthy for the absence from view of any cameras except at the back of the hall, where it did not matter.

Long before Lily says it, we receive the message about fans: First they try to love you, then they try to kill you.

One approach to this thrift-shop material would be black camedy, to attempt to out-spoof what is aiready selfparody. Trying to treat the situation realistically, Mr. Whitney has wandered not to "Sunset Boulevard" but down the path to pathos; the characters are as pathetic as they are predictable.b

The evening's only interest is in the performance. Once again Marshall W. Mason bas assembled an expert cast and directed it to inhabit a stage space -in this case a Joho Lee Beattydesigned basement cinema shop.

Leueen MacGrath, too rarely a visitor to the New York stage, is exactly in key with Lili, capturing the character's Garboesque smokiness and latent bitchiness. The play's liveliest moments are when she is trying to tell her fans—against their will—what life really was like in Hollywood. "We all looked alike" she insists Stars are "interalike," sbe insists. Opera: Met's 'Forza del Destino'

Despite last year's extensive restaging and restoration of cuts, the Metro-politan Opera's 25-year-old production of Verdi's "La Forza del Destina" is still a very spotty affair, and he situation did not show many signs of improvement at the season's first performacce on Saturday night.

John Dexter's direction seems essentially a faceless cobbling together of incidents that do little to clarify either the complex plot or the characters. Possibly his imagination was hampered by the nld sets, lack of time or the fact that the present cast contains few singers who can act convincingly. At any rate, the performance failed to catch fire.

Giuseppe Giacomini, an Italian tenor with 10 years of experience in major European houses, made his debut as Don Alvaro. Mr. Giacomini possesses a handsome voice with a rich baritonal timbre and can generate a great volume of sound when the occasion demands. Until the final act h seemed extremely ill at ease; his stage presence was stiff and there were several moments of vocal constriction. When he settles into the role perhaps his singing will become less monochromatic and freer. The voice itself is definitely of superior quality.

Except for Ezin Flagello's bluff Melitone, his first at the Met, the rest of the cast was familiar Sherrill Milnes stole the vocal honors with his selfassured, glamorously sung Don Carlo. Martina Arroyn poured out ber ample soprano generously but with minimal musical or dramatic point, while Rosa-lind Elias (Preziosilla) and Bonaldo Giaiotti (Padre Guardiano) handled their assignements with practiced compe-

Chicago Ensemble Still Best Group For Improvisation

By JOHN ROCKWELL

The Art Ensemble of Chicago, which lpayed two performances at the Kitchen Saturday and last night, is justly regarded as the premier avant-garde free-improvisiational ensemble of the day.

The word "improvisational" is the key to the quinter's style. All jazz involves improvisation, to be sure, in that a tune is transformed and expanded through the elaborations of solo flights and group interaction. The Art Eosemble practices this sort of improvisation occasionally, but generally it serves as contrast to the rest and as a point of reference for the many jazz fans who still made up the bulk of Saturday's audience. "Free improvisation" is the mostly spontaneous generation of sounds inde-pendent not only of a recognizable tune, but also of conventional notions of melody, harmony and rhythm. This hardly means an indifferentiated stasis: The Art Ensemble's music is full of sharply de-fined sections linked by sensitively gauged transitions, and the rhythm section (Malachi Favors and Don Moye) is as prone to binding ostioatos as to random coloristic effects from their vast array of exotic percussion. In fact, one assumes the players make use of intermittent pre-planned effects; if they don't, their sensitivity to one another approaches the telepathic.

When one describes Mr. Fayors and

Mr. Moye as the "rhythm section." one ignores a principal characteristic of the Art Ensemble, which is that nearly everybody plays nearly everything at haod. Still, Lester Bowie, Joseph Jarman and Roscoe Mitchell stick mostly to brass instruments (trumpet and a range of saxophones) and the variety of iodividual and concerted effects they achieve is remarkable.

The whole notion of free improvisation presupposes an anarchistic philosophy that not all may share; for some freedom is best attained through form. But there can be little doobt that the Art Ensemble makes a superbly seductive case for its approach to music.

FRANK FOSTER SHOWS OFF HIS INVOLVEMENT IN JAZZ

The scope of Frank Foster's involvemeot in jazz was put on full display Saturday evening at Town Hall when the onetime Count Basie saxophonist appeared as arranger, composer, soloist and conductor of his 22-piece band, the Loud Minority, and his 12-piece ensemble, Living Color, as well as the Jazzmobile Worksbop Orchestra.

His Loud Minority Is a potentially impressive big jazz band, polished in its execution and dotted with capable solo-ists, ootably C. I. Williams, an alto saxophonist with a warm, singing tone, Kenny Rogers, a full-bodied baritone saxophonist, Sinclair Acey, a crisp and pungent trumpeter, and Charles Stephens, a trombonist with a gruff, rugged attack. But Mr. Foster's arrangements tend to be heavy, to hammer away full blast when some variety of color and tone might keep the piece from dwindling

Even in support of a pair of strong-oiced singers, Joe Lee Wilson and Andy Bey, the band overpowered them instead of supporting them.

Living Color was a looser group, drawn from the big band and with the big band's fondness for overplaying, although it managed to establish the soaring theme of Dooald Byrd's "Fancy Free" in a sensitive maoner before the volume rose For a student group, the Jazzmobile Workship Orchestra had a commendaby crisp attack, especially in view of the fact that there were more than two dozen musicians in the group. But the soloists were not able to maintain the standards of the ensemble as a whole. JOHN S. WILSON

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1910 Rebirthing: A Philosophy That Recalls the First Trauma of Life In the first $35 "dry" rebirthing, the been rebirthed once or 1940st.

His arms flailing around in the tub of warm water, snorkel in place, Arthur began to scream a very primal scream. "I don't want to be born! I don't want to be born! I don't want to be here at all!"

Dana had images. Scary images. Traumatic images. "I was physically paralyzed. I had a clear picture of my birth. I didn't want to breathe. The umbilical cord was wrapped around my neck. I couldn't breathe. I was Robin heard it all. He felt the car crash. He heard his mother scream is his father. "If there is anything wrong with this child I'll never talk to you again." Three months pre-mature, he was delivered into the world in the house of an aunt. He remembers it all. Being born. Being placed in the middle of a four-poster bed. In a room. All alone.

Reliving the Trauma

They call it birth trauma. And Arthur, Dana and Robin, all devotees of rebirthing, one of the newest philosophies in the buman potential movement, have all been "rebirthed."

They took off their clothes, donned a snorkel and noseclip, submerged themselves in a bathbub and began to breathe. And as they breathed, deeper and deeper, they went back. Literally reliving, not just conjuring up images. Back to the beginning. Back to what Freud called the first trauma. Birth. 10.000 Have Been Rebirthed

Since April 1974 more than 10,000 people have been rebirthed through a national organization called Theta, a group founded by a former EST consultant, Leonard Orr, that is consciously part of the "self-improvement"

EST is a 60-hour self-realization program developed in 1971 by Werner Erhard, a former management consultant. The program-Erhard Seminars Training—encourages people to take responsibility for their own lives and to understand that they are the cause of their experiences.

Most of Theta's trained rebirthers and many of those being rebirthed are EST graduates.

Theta's New York office, at 123 West 94th Street, is one of a dozen rebirthing centers around the country. Followers of the rebirthing movement helieve that at the moment of hirth we form impressions about the world that we carry with us all of our lives, controlling us from a subconscious level. Most of the impressions, they say, are negative: Life is a struggle, life is painful, people will hurt me, I can't get enough love. The idea behind rebirthing is that, after nine supposedly blissful months in the womb, with all our needs taken care of and nothing to do but enjoy, we were shot into a world of bright lights, strangers, noxious noises and yanked from a world of pleasure and calm to a world of pain and chaos.

up our breathing mechanism, learn that breathing is a positive, not a negative force. Most people go through life by underbreathing, not letting go, stuffing the birth trauma back into themselves," she said.

People begin unraveling the birth

"Our first breath is probably the closest we come to dying, so we don't see breathing as a pleasurable experience."

And, so they say, it has colored our view of life ever since.

Go back and relive your birth, understand it as an adult, and suddenly life will become a bit clearer, believe the rebirthers. Essentially, what it's all about is breathing. And letting go. "Our first breath is probably the closest we ever come to dying, and so we doo't see breathing as a pleasurable experience," explained Diane Hinter-mann, a young Californian who is a trained rebirther and has been with the tion three and a half years ago.

"Through rebirthing, we learn to free trauma by first attending a $10 rebirth seminar, where the rebirthing philos-ophy is discussed and procedures are explained. Clients then spend several individual sessions with a trained rebirther, someone who's been rebirthed probably dozens of times and has sufficiently worked out his own birth trauma to assist at another rebirth.

At these individual sessions (first "dry" and then "wet" rebirths), the rehirther takes the client through what is called the "breathing release," during which many people relive many of the subsconscious traumas associated individual simply lies flat on his back and is encouraged to breathe tobreathe deeply and into his or her own fears, letting them all go on the exhale. Later, when he feels ready, the individ-ual may go through a $50 "wet" rebirth, where he is placed in a warm tub of water with a snorkel and noseplug, simulating the womb, and essentially is encouraged to "breathe himself into the world and to life."

What happens during the rehitthing -which can go on for several hours at a session and can include up to a dozen sessions before a person is "clear"—is that many people just stop breathing, mostly out of fear. Others begin to choke, simulating the choking of the umbilical cord. Others begin to "see" things, as if in a dram. Some actually relive their birth, seeing a Technicolor "dream" of the event.

Recently, a group of 30 New Yorkers began unraveling their birth trauma by meeting in an Upper East Side apart ment for the rebirth seminar conducted hy Miss Hintermann. Like others being rebirthed around the country, most of the participents were young mid-20s to mid-30s—and open to "self-improvement." They were not strangers to the psychiatrist's office, to yoga, medita-tion, EST, group therapy or Rolfing. Some were rebirth novices, some had been repirthed once or twice and wanted to hear more, and others rebirthers themselves.

Raphael, 20ish and dark-eyed, got to introduce himself as a return regular. He's been in and out of the tub so many times he's lost count.
"I think it's because I had to special lot of time in the membator." In

What I got from rebirthing is the you don't have to struggle to live struggle for love from one another, struggle for love from oneself, it's there, you just have to be with take it."

Life Is 'a Lot of Fun Marsha, a tall woman in her 20's, explained that she bad birthed a year ago, and since the had been "a lot of fun." "I was a Caessrean birth. During rebirthing I got a clear picture of knife coming down, being picked and put into a basket and put room, abandoned.

"During subsequent rebirthings" gan to work out all of my realized the really had a lot of love and support birth, but also that there was a lot fear that I was going to die I die die And through rebirthing I was a to get back all that love and supp that was there from birth."

A Tearful Parting Between a Man and His Toys

For 20 years Archie and Emma Stiles filled the bookshelves, closets and cupboards of their roomy Victorian house with the sort of castiron fire engines, circus elephants and china-head dolls they say they had never owned as children.

"We were too poor, and there were too many children—six boys in all," Mr. Stiles said. I doo't remember owning any toys either," Mrs. Stiles said. The couple made up with a vengeance, collecting as adults not only the toys they had missed in childbood but also any other younger and older toys that they had found appealing. They shared their thousands of purchases with their soo and, more recently, their grandson.

Hundreds of children over the years have come to call and to watch the 15 Virginia white-tail deer that wander through the front parlor of their house in Meyersville, N.J., and the children have remained to admire, wide-eyed, the vast toy collec-

An Auctioo Planned

Half of that collection is to be auctioned this week at Sothehy Parke Bernet, and the couple were asked why they were selling the toys now. Mr. Stiles explained that the rooms of their Morris County home had be-come crammed with well-worn teddy bears, wind-up waddling ducks, carousel horses, doll carriages and such. As the bouse filled up, the couple began to store the larger playthings — velocipedes, wagons, carts and sleds—in the open sheds

The three-acre plot is also the site of the couple's two flourishing business ventures-Archie's Resale Shop (a secondhand furnishings operation) and an ice-skate exchange. When the collection began to get out of band, spilling over into areas where the salable merchandise was stowed, Mrs. Stiles campaigned quietly to sell.

"It's time to begin to let go," Mr.
Stiles eventually told his wife. "But

Mrs. Stiles confessed that she was a bit surprised that the dolls, which she likes far less than mechanical toys, represented such a large segment of the sale. "I never put them out on exhibition," she said. "I used to stuff them in the chests of draw-

Makeup: The Magic Of Wands

Wouldn't it be nice to grab a handful of cylinders, wands and tubes, dump them all in a pencil case, take off for an indefinite period of time, and still look as attractive as artifice will

Well, it's very likely to happen because an increasing oumber of the cosmetic people are coming up with easy-to-handle portable packaging for almost everything. And not only portable, but skinnier and sleeker as well, and all in all, more streamlined than ever before. If we cast our minds back, a lot of us can remember the stir when wand mascara was introduced, almost eliminating old-fashioned cake-and-spit coloring. Then a number of companies, Elizabeth Arden and Estèe Lauder prominent among them, brought out colored pencils to frame, line, contour and highlight. Pablo at Arden, an acknowledged master of the art, created faces the way painters created por-

And all along, plastic tubes were sneaking in here, there and everywhere, from foundation to cleansing, moisturizing and hand creams. Drop them on the floor, throw them into handbags, tuck them into suitcase corners-no breakage and no spillage. Beauty was becoming lightweight and almost fool-

A Still Further Refinement

The latest development, as one might expect, is a still further refinement, both in size and in application. There are now compact and attractive eye shadow wands that obviate finger blending and roll-on lip glosses that obviate messy brushes and still-messier finger application. And an even more ubiquitous new shape, if one can so describe an old shape used for new purposes, is the lipstick case. Max Factor has an eye makeup remover stick that glides on easily and wipes off in a flash; Helena Rubinstein and Revlon Moon Drops have eye wrinkle sticks, and Germaine Manteil a super moist eye stick, that are applied in the same manoer as lipstick, and moisturize and lubricate without all the under-eye pat, pat, patting that used to go on.

With that same flick of the wrist, it's possible, too, to remedy nature'a errors and conceal the blemishes that come along to plague us. Clinique has a rather tall and elegant touch stick liquid tube for healing, and a lipstickshaped concealing stick. Rubenstein's medicated and concealing sticks both look like lipsticks and, as life would have it, Max Factor's well-known Erace, which used to look like lipstick, now comes in a more sophisticated swiveltop container. Of course, not every company has packaged every item for easy portability. But it's possible even now, with careful shopping, to accumulate in stick and tube form almost every beauty aid one might need. The nicest thing about it all, pehaps because it brings back our childhood days, is the feeling conveyed by pencils and tubes. One creates, rather than applies, a look. Now just a spray or two of fragrance, and here the choice is indeed wide. Almost every company has a cylindrical spray tube, some skinny, some not quite so, but few too repust to make it into that pencil case.

Bain-Marie, a French Stove Bath, and the last of our same of the last of the l

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We were fascinated to read a letter from Hughes Rudd of CBS Television News pertaining to our dissertation on bain-marie, the water bath so widely used in kitchens throughout the world to keep sauces warm and prevent their curdling over too-intense heat.

Mr. Rudd tells us that he has a house in southwestern France and "none of my oeighbors there has ever heard of

"My wife wanted to make zabaghone last summer and we couldn't even find one in Albi, which is a fair-sized city," he said. "The village priest, who's the best cook in that area, said they didn't exist, that to make something of that sort he just used a small saucepan sitting in a larger saucepan full of water.

"We finally decided, despite the inclusion of bain-marie in Larousse, that the implement must be peculiar to other parts of France, not the southwest.'

Mr. Rudd, among several others, offered his thoughts on the origin of the Bloody Mary, for which we recently printed a recipe.

"I had my first Bloody Mary at Felix's Blue Bar on the Croisette in Cannes in 1944," be said. "It was called a Blood and Guts, and Felix told me be'd named it for Gen. George Patton. It was made exactly as are most Bloody Marys today: vodka, tomato juice, Worcesterchire sauce and hot pepper sauce (doubt that Felix had any genuine Tabasco sauce squirreled away). "In 1948 I went back to Felix's, this time as a newspaperman, and be was still serving the Blood and Guts but by then had changed the name to Bloody Mary."

Mary. The author, Jill Newman, mentioned that determining the origin of the drink was "almost as difficult as determining who first cooked a beef patty and named it a hamburger."

"Leonard Lyoos proclaimed in his column that George Jessel was the inventor," she wrote, "while his rival, Walter Winchell, countered that it was oovelist Ernest Hemingway who came up with it sometime during the Twenties. A more likely prospect is Fernand L. Petiot, who began experimenting with vodka drinks in 1920 while dispensing libations at Harry's New York bar in Paris." She added, The drink never caught on in France, but Petiot brought it with him to the States in 1934 when he went to work for Vincent Astor who then owned New York's St. Regis Hotel." Petiot's drink was not called a Bloody Mary. George Jessel, Miss Newman wrote, says that he not only created the drink but named it as well. He was, she says, a sort of toastmaster. and roving ambassador for a leading vodka maker.

And no one, we firmly believe, will ever know the truth.

When we wrote recently of Audrey Bender's quest for Ba-Tampte pickles, which she opined, were the best com-mercial pickles she had ever eaten but which she no longer found on her supermarket shelves, we were deluged with responses from readers offering sources for these pickles.

Many of them, incidentally, stated strong admiration also for another brand of pickles, the half-sour pickles packaged by Schorr. Others expressed equal enthusiasm for the pickles that bear the Cleusen label.

In any event, some of the random sources offered for Ba-Tampte pickles included D'Agostino's at 97th Street and Amsterdam Avenue; Wildbaum's in Brooklyn; Grand Central Markets in Avenue between 13th and 14th 9 Stoane's at Second Avenue and Street, and an International sup PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28 - Mirror, mirror on the wall, who's the tough-est team of all? The Islanders posed the question at the Spectrum tonight and the Philadelphia Flyers, their mir-ror image, answered, "We are," with 5-3 victory in a game between Patrick Division rivals.

The first three scores were on power plays, with Philadelphia jumping to a 1-0 lead on Rick MacLeish's 14th goal of the season, while Pat Price was in the penalty box for high-sticking.

Giants Triumph by 28-16; Csonka Injured

Special to The New York Times

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J., Nov. 26-The Giants got their second victory of the season today, but it hurt almost as much as their 10 defeats.

The New York Times

In the course of a 28-16 decision over the Seattle Seahawks, one of the National Football League's worst teams, the Giants lost Larry Csonka and Tom Mullen for their final two games with torn knee ligaments.

games with form knee figurements.

Both players probably will need surgery, Csonka on his left knee, Mullen on his right. They will see Dr. John Marshall, the team physician, at the New York Hospital for Special Surgery tomorrow for tests. Csonka, the million-dollar fullback, blamed the AstroTurf surface in Giants Stadium for his injury, which came on the third play of the second quarter Csonka had carried for 8 yards to the Seattle 11-yard line as the Giants were driving for their first score, but he was stopped by "three or four guys."

His left leg was pinned to the artifi-cial surface, which has great traction,

I could have moved my foot just an inch, I'd have been all right," Csonka said. "I knew it was going to happen when I couldn't get the foot free."

Csonka said if he had been playing on natural grass, he would have been able to slide bis foot free. "I've never been a friend of that surface," he said, "and this isn't going to make it any more warm in my heart than it was before."

Dr. Marshall said the injuries to Csonka and Mullen were more serious than the torn knee ligament suffered last week by Jack Gregory, who is also out for the season. Dr. James Nicholas, the Jets' physician, will be coosulted tomorrow by Dr. Marshall on the latest injuries.

Csonka wound up the game with three carries for 16 yards. For the season, he gained 569 yards on 160 carries and scored four touchdowns.

Mullen, the regular left tackle, was injured late in the third quarter on a play during which Craig Morton was sacked for the fifth time by a defense that is rated the worst in the league. It was a play that brought up a fourth down and 48 for the Giants, and for a while it appeared that Mullen was lying on the ground laughing at the inept performances by both 2-10 teams.

Mullen was in pain. He had beard the ligament 'pop," and his knee was "looser than mine," said Csonka. "I felt mine stretching, but I didn't hear Csonka and Mullen joined some other members of the Giant offense on the sidelines: John Hicks, the right guard, who was replaced inadequately hy Ron Mikolajczyk; Jimmy Robinson and Ray Rhodes, the regular wide receivers, who were replaced by Walker Gillette and Ed Marshall adequately.

That the Giants were able to score the most points in a game all season and were able to get their first two touchdown passes in seven games can be attributed to the first year Sea-

"I guess we are going to give up 28 points a game no matter who we play," said Jack Patera, Seattle's coach.

'Wasn't that the most points the Giants have scored this year? Everybody scores 28 points ar more against us."

The Seahawks have allowed 368 points, an average of 30.7 a game. Yet they took a quick 9-0 lead when the Giants, and especially Rondy Colbert, forgot how to field kicks. Colbert fumbled a punt, Seattle re-covered on the Giant 33 and six plays later the Hawks scored a touchdown. Colbert then let the ensuing kickoff go through his legs, the Giants were pinned deep in their territory and John Leypoldt, who had missed the extra point, soon had a 46-yard field goal. There were 76,386 tickets sold, but

11,275 customers did not show. How-ever, the boos for Norton were as loud

But the Giants' quarterback, who was so incensed at the crowd that he threw a left hook at the stands (it was short) in the first half, had one of his best games. He completed 15 of 21 passes, although he was rushed constantly. Two passes were for touchdowns to

Colts Beat Jets, 33-16, Getting 24 in 2d Quarter

By GERALD ESKENAZI Special to The New York Times

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28-The Jets did not want to give the game away today, but they did.

It was to be a ball-control effort against the Colts, heading for a playoff, in the wake of last Sunday's 10 turnovers by the Jets in a loss to the New England Patriots.

Today they wasted whatever chance they had at an upset and bowed hy 33-16. They got 6 points right away and 7 points right at the end, so the losing margin hardly indicated the extent of the Colt's domination.

In fact Baltimore came up with a 24-point second quarter that sunk the Jets, who failed to score for Joe Na-

Fumbles on Both Sides

This time Namath entered the game midway through the second quarter with the Colts leading, 17-9. He left in the third quarter with the Colts leading, 30-9.

Richard Todd started for the fifth straight time and the Jets quickly scored, thanks to a fumble recovery on the opening play hy John Eber-sole. Roosevelt Leaks was hit so hard hy Bnrgess Owens that the hall squirted to Ebersole, who took it 29 yards to the Colts' 6. Soon, Steve Davis went over.

Toni Linhart got the first of his four field goals to cut into the New Yorkers' edge, but the underdogs (by 19 points) got the field goal back from Pat Leahy.

It was not surprising the Colts went dead in the second quarter. They have Bert Jones at quarterback and Lydell Mitchell to run and catch. So they took a 10-9 lead, oo a Doo Mc-Cauley touchdown.

But the ensuing kickoff was fum-bled by Louie Giammona only 17 yards from the Jets' end zone. It was Giammona's second fumble on a kickoff in two games. The Colts soon scored and had a 17-9 edge.

Completed 22 of 32

Giammona fumbled on a run as soon as Namath got into the game, and that helped position a 34-yard field goal. A bad punt by Duane Carrell set up another score, and by halftime it was 27-9 for Baltimore.

It also rained. It was only the sec-ond time in his coaching career that a team of Lou Holtz's was rained on. It rained a third time, he points out, "but that was when we played in the Astrodome.'

Namath seemed to be under his own cloud. He completed three of eight attempts — hut three others were dropped. His yardage totaled 16 feet. He was sacked as soon as he got into the game by Joe Ehrmann, who has a tattoo of a wolf on his right hiceps. Todd was only six for 15, amassing 105 yards. At first, he threw hardly at all, yielding to the runners. It worked at first. But once the Colts scored they kept moving irresistably goalward, and Jones had himselt

Yankees Met Jackson's Price And Standards

By MURRAY CHASS

Reggie Jackson might have rejected "king's ransom" from the Montreal Expos, but when he formally signs a five-year contract with the Yankees today, he will clutch in his hands a package that at least must be considered a princely sum.

The package, according to a source close to the negotiations that were wrapped up on Saturday, totals $2.9 million, just short of the magic $3 million mark that only Catfish Hunter has achieved in baseball.

A $100,000 salary for one season used to be baseball's magic figure, but that was before Andy Messersmith and Dave McNaily challenged the renewal option clause in their contracts.

One year after that historic assault on the sports reserve system, Jackson, the source reported, has agreed to this basic financial structure:

$2 millioo in salary and deferred payments for the life of the contract. That averages to $400,000 a year, which is even considerably more than the $250,000 Hunter earns with the Yankees each year in salary and deferred payment.

CAnother $900,000 divided into a signing honus to be paid immediately and deferred payments to be made for 15 years starting at the conclusion of the five-year contract. That total is believed to be broken down this way: $450,000 hoous and $450,000 deferred at the rate of $30,000 a year. When the Yankees signed Hunter as

Warriors Rout Hawks in First Road Triumph

ATLANTA, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Golden State Warriors, led by Rick Barry, grabbed en early lead and easily beat the Atlanta Hawks, 132-98, in the National Basketball Association tonight. The Warriors took an early 12-10 edge and then scored 8 straight points. Barry tossed in 20 points, Jamal Wilkes got 18 and Charles Johnson 16 for the Warriors, who led by 67-50 at halftime and 97-75 at the end of the third period. They outscored the Hawks, 9-2, late in the third period as their lead sweled to 20 points. It was the first road victory of the year for Golden State, which had lost six previous games away from home.

The Warriors also snapped a threegame lesing streak. The top scorers for Atlanta were : Armond Hill with 21 points and John Drew with 19.

up very well. In nonleague games, Wake Forest edged North Carolina, 97-96, in overtime; Duke bear North Carolina State, 34-82, end Maryland was an 80-79 overtime loser to Notre Dame.

The Wake Forest triumph was its third straight in the Big Four Tournsment, which sold out the Greensboro (N. C. Coliseum (15,626 persons each night and Duke's triumph was in the consolation round, North Carolina was ranked No. 3 nationally in preseason polls and North Carolina State, No. 14. But perhaps Maryland's loss at home was even more startling. The Terps are ranked No. 11.

"It looks like a typical A.C.C. seasoo again," said Coach Carl Tacy of Wake Forest, by telephone from his home in Winston-Salem, N. C. "It shows the balance of the league from too to bottom. Most of the teams had many players returning and all had good ; recruiting years, I would guess any team can beat the other on any given

3 Starters Return

Jerry Schellenberg, Wake Forest's 6foot-6-inch senior forward, was oamed the tournaments' most valuable player for the second straight year after he bad scored 40 points, including 22 against the Tar Heels.

"It's got to the point that people are kidding us about this being the Wake Forest Invitational," said Schellenberg, one of the three returning starters.

Tacy, commenting on his team's string of Big Four victories said: 'Maybe it's our approach to the tournament. Our main objective is to do well in the opening round and let the final take care of itself. We've bad some tough opponents the last three years. Two years ago we beat State when they were No. 1 in the nation and the last two years it's been North Carolina, ranked pretty high at the time."

Every time Lefty Driesell, the Maryland coach, looks at his right leg for the next two months or so, be will remember the loss to Notre Dame. Patriots Win, 38-14, Rushing 332 Yards And Drawing Near to a Playoff Berth

The New England Patriots took another step toward a "wild-card" playoff berth in the American Conference with their 33-14 destruction of the Denver Broncos at Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro, Mass., yesterday. The Patriots not only set a club rushing record of 332 yards in one game but also held Denver to 44 yards rushing and sacked Steve Ramsey, the Bronco quarterback, nine times for losses totaling 59 yards.

The victory, New England's ninth in 12 games this National Football League season, was a total-team effort. Steve Grogan, quarterback, ran 1 yard for a touchdown and threw a 3yard pass to Al Chandler, his tight end, for aoother.

Mike Haynes, a rookie, returned a punt 62 yards for a touchdown and also intercepted a Ramsey pass. Andy Johnson ran I yard for a score, and ike Forte, a rookie, ran 3 yards for one. John Smith kicked a 49-yard field goal. Tony McGee and Ray Hamilton had three sacks each, and Julius Adams, Keith Barnes and Steve Zabel accounted for the three others.

Don Calhoun accounted for more than half the New England rushing yardage, running 177 yards. This was Calhoun's third 100-yard game since he replaced the injured Sam Cunningham.

The Patriots, who still trail the Baltimore Colts by a game in their conference's Eastern Division, nonetheless need only one more victory to clinch their first playoff berth in 13 years, since 1963 and the old American Football League. The Patriots have only New Orleans and Tampa Bay, two weak teams, to play in the regular season. New England has beaten the Pittsburgh Steelers this season, and the remaining American Conference team with a shot at the wild-card spot, the Cleveland Browns, has a poor divisional record. This virtually eliminates the Browns under the N.F.L.'s complicated rules for playoff qualification.

Redskins 24, Eagles 0 AT WASHINGTON-Dennis Johnson. Washington defensive end, recovered two fumbles, and Billy Kilmer, the Redskins quarterback, took advantage of both by throwing touchdown passes of 17 and 14 yards, both to Mike Thomas, running back. Thomas, a second-year pro, also rushed for 49 yards, pushing over the 1,000-yard mark, to 1,003. Kilmer threw a third touchdown pass, of 41 yards to Frank Grant, and the Redskins moved into a secondplace tie with St, Louis in the Eastern Division. Should they finish tied with the Cards, they could win the wild-

Farrell Tops Tottenville for Unbeaten Year

Monsigoor Farrell played the final schoolboy football game of the year in the city vesterday and completed an undefeated season when it beat Tottenville, 21-9, at Farrell's field on

Alex DeJesus, Farrell's quarterback, scored one touchdown and passed to Frank Marone for a score with four minutes to play to give Farrell its second unbeaten season in a row. Farrell's last loss was to Tottenville in 1974. Farrell was tied in the second game this season by Wagner, which won the Public Schools Athletic League Staten

Then DeJesus hit Marone on a 26yard play and Bob Hartie scored from 7 yards out to enable Farrell to wrap up. its unbeaten season. In addition, many of the Farrell seniors never lost a game, Most of them played on an unbeaten junior varsity for two seasons and then played Iwo varsity seasons card berth by virtue of their two victories over St. Louis this season. Bears 16, Packers 10

AT GREEN BAY, Wis.—Bob Thomas kicked three field goals, and Bob Avel-lini and James Scott teamed on a 49yard pass play for a touchdown, giving Chicago the victory. The Packer defense got warm in 6-degree weather by running after Walter Payton, who gained 110 yards to take the league's

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Browns 17, Dolphins 13 AT CLEVELAND-Knocked out of playoff contention last Monday night, Miami almost played spoiler. However, Garo Yepremian, the Dolphins' kicker, missed an extra point and a 22-yard field goal. Playing on his 34th birthday, Paul Warfield, the former Dolphin, caught a 12-yard touchdown pass for the Browns, and Cleveland's Reggie Rucker grabbed an 18-yarder. Both were thrown by Brian Sipe in a swirling snowstorm to keep Cleveland's slim playoff hopes alive. Bob Griese of the Dolphins threw scoring passes of 4 and 10 yards to Larry Seiple and Fred Solomon, respectively. The Dolphins, with a 5-7 record, are facing their first losing season since Don Shula became head coach in 1970.

Raiders 49, Buccaneers 16

AT OAKLAND, Calif.—Ken Stabler completed 15 of 23 passes for 245 yards, including his 22d and 23d touchdown passes, the most in the league. Oakland, which has already won the Western Division title, thus sent the Bucs to their 12th straight defeat. With only Pittsburgh and New England remaining on its schedule, Tampa Bay has an excellent chance to become the first N.F.L. team to finish a season

Chiefs 23, Chargers 20

AT SAN DIEGO — Ed Podolak's 5-yard run for a touchdown capped an 84-yard Kansas City drive and put the Chiefs on top to stay with five minutes to play. It was the second 5-yard scoring run of the game for Podolak, who rushed for 127 yards on 25 carries. Jan Stenerud added three field goals for the Chiefs.

Oilers 20, Falcons 14

AT HOUSTON-John Hadl, starting his third game at quarterback for Houston in place of Dan Pastorini, connected with Billy Jobnson for a 40-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter, and the Oiler defense held off the feisty Falcons long enough o break a six-game losing streak.

Atlanta, which had entered the game with consecutive upset victories over San Francisco and Dallas, took a 14-10 lead early in the third quarter on a 27-yard touchdown pass from Scott Hunler to Alfred Jenkins. But Hadi then threw his touchdown pass to Johnson, his second scoring pass of the game. A 33-yard interception return by C. L. Whittington set up a 32-yard Skip Butler field goal that concluded the scoring. The Oiler defense held at its 6-yard line with I minute 18 seconds to play to preserve

Clements, a former Notre Dame quarterback, tossed a 24-yard touchdown pass to Tony Gabriel with 20 seconds to play today to give the Ottawa Rough Riders a 23-20 victory over the Saskatchewan Roughnners in the Grey Cup, the Canadian Football League championship game.

The winning touchdown came just a minute after Saskatchewan had stopped Clements on a third-down play at the Roughrider I-yard line, apparently killing the Eastern Conference champlons' last chance to overtake the Western Conference representatives.

But after Saskatchewan failed to move the ball, Ottawa got the ball back at the Saskatchewan 30-yard line on Bob Macoritti's punt into the wind and outcome cut the Bengals lead over the Steelers from two games to one in the Central Division of the American Conference.

Pittsburgh's won-lost record is now 8-4 and Cincinnati's 9-3. If the Bengais had won they would have clinched the division title and eliminated the Steelers from playoff qualification.

Pittsburgh has two games left against impotent teams. Tampa Bay and Houston, and the way the Steelers are going they should win them both. Cincinnati must play the Raiders, the Western Division champions, in Oakland a week from tomorrow night and the Jets in New York on the last day of the season, ended in a tie with Pittsburgh, the Steelers would go to the playoffs and the Bengals would go home. Why? The tie would break in Pittsburgh's favor because the Steelers beat the Bengais twice this season.

If the Bengals did not lose again, the Steelers would go bome. They could end with the same won-lost record as the New England Patriots of the Eastern Division but the wild-card position in the playoffs—the one that goes to the second-place team in the cooference's three divisions with the best record—would belong to the Patriots. Why? The tie would break for them because they beat the Steelers on Sept.

26 when Pittsburgh was still reflecting on its Super Bowl triumphs of the last two seasons.

So the fumble by Clark, the fullback, in the 12th minute of the third quarter today was more than a mistake. It was a disaster.

Dwight White, a Steeler defensive end, fell on the ball at the Cincinnati 24 and four plays later Franco Harris bulled his way into the Bengal end

The way the snow was coming down, it seemed unlikely that either side could score again. But each almost did. The Bengals held the Steelers at the Cincinnati 2 on fourth down, and near the end Kenny Anderson's last two the Steelers' 26 but no farther.

The game had two distinct parts. The first half was played on a dry field and each side felt out the other. The offenses were conservative, the defenses dominant. The only score was a 40-yard field goal by the Bengals' Chris Babr.

Noll, who could afford to be expansive, thought it was a shame that the snow, which began to fall at halftime, wrecked the last two quarters.
"On a field like that," he said, "reactions disappear. "Runners can't run. Receivers cao't cut. Pass rushers can't Com-FG. Bahr. 40 Pitt.—Harrs. 2, run (Corrie, hith), Atlendance—52,142.

Two big $253 Specials from AME, the small car specialist.

Unlike the other manufacturers, who build cars of all sizes, AMC is exclusively a small car producer. Therefore, we have a lot at stake on the success of small cars.

Recently, the small car market has diminished substantially. Over the last five years, increased costs have forced prices up more than $1,000. As a result, American car buyers have pretty much stayed away, not only from AMC small cars, but from all small cars.

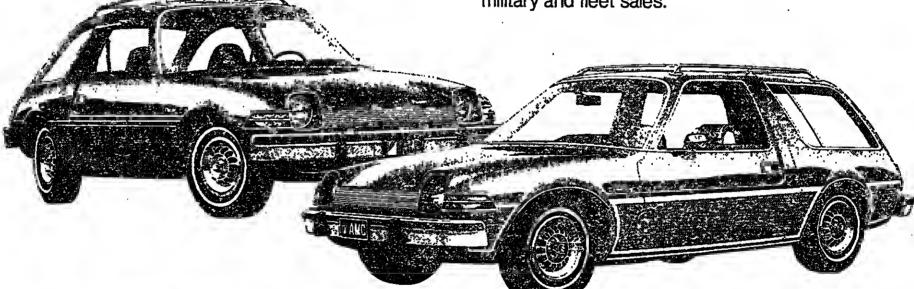

At American Motors, we're doing something about it. By attacking the problem in the most direct way we know how. By initiating pricing programs designed to save you a lot of money.

Our goal is to increase our sales volume by encouraging you, the car buyer, to return to the small car market. If we can get you to consider a small car, we're confident that the small car you buy will be an AMC.

I) $253 cash rebate on every new AMG Pacer and Pacer Wagon.

Right now, you get a $253 cash rebate when you buy any new 1976 or 1977 AMC Pacer. Make your best deal with your AMC Dealer and American Motors will send you a $253 cash rebate. Or, if you like, you can apply the $253 to your down payment. This cash rebate offer is good on all AMC Pacers and Pacer Wagons delivered from stock by January 10 or ordered by December 10. Excluding military and fleet sales.

2) $253 price reduction on every new 1977 AMC Gremlin."

The list price of all 1977 AMC Gremlins has been reduced by $253. This reduction applies to all Gremlins now in dealer stock, and to all orders placed on or after November 5.

AMC Gremlin now only $2995.*

*The manufacturer's suggested retail price for Gremlin is now just $2995. Destination charges, dealer prep, state and local taxes, white walls, wheel covers and other options extra.

The Emerson plant, empty and silent in Jersey City. The Empire State Building is at rear.

Those Lively Days at Emerson: Who Thought They'd Ever End?

Feb. 13, 1970, is a date that most workers at the Emerson Electric Company's television and radio plant in Jersey City will never forget.

On that day a voice boomed over the public-address loudspeaker in the middle of the work shift with the news that the plant would be perma-nently closed in four months. After that, television sets made by the 1,000 production workers in Jersey City would instead be supplied by a plant in Taiwan.

Such scenes have been played often in the Northeast industrial states where thousands of plants have closed because of various pressures -competition from imports, migration of companies to other areas and the phasing out of obsolete factories. Between 1969 and 1972 alone,

1,129,000 workers in the northeastern and east-central states lost their jobs because of plant closings. Since 1969 New York City bas lost 620,000 jobs. The electronics industry has been hit particularly hard, with imports cutting deeply into the radio and television markets. The membership of District 3 of the International Union of Electrical Workers, covering the states of New York and New Jersey, has dropped from 110,000 in the 1960's to the present 70,000.

What has happened to these work-ers? What has been their experience? Workers from the old Emerson plant recounted in interviews how they took the news of the closing and how they have spent the last six years.

Some found new jobs. A few were able to find better careers and nigher pay. Some chose to retire. Others looked for new jobs but found that companies were reluctant to hire people in their late 40's or 50's.

Most of the Emerson workers recalled an overwhelming feeling of despair shortly after Feb. 13, 1970. "It was like a funeral, like the death of something." Gloria Jeffries said recently. Mrs. Jeffries, who started working at the plant in 1949, was the treasurer of Local 480 of the LU.E., which represented the plant. She said some workers were so upset by the announcement they had to be taken home.

Hope flickered for several weeks as workers tried to pool their savings, pensions and union funds in bopes of buying the plant and running it. They failed. The plant, situated near the entrance to the Holland Tunnel where a big neon sign still proclaims

She began to watch for the an-nouncements of Civil Service examinations and took the one for elevator operator. That August she got job as an elevator operator at Margaret Hague Maternity Hospital, a division of the Medical Center in

Although Mrs. Bingham is satisfied with her job, she misses the closeknit relationships and special events

At this time of year, she recalled, with her eyes opening wide and her bands spreading, "We would be trimming the plant with lights. It looked like a city, all decorated. There was such a spirit in that plant."

Supervisors at Emerson would come through the work area and ask, "How you feeling, Sweetheart?" Such things have not happened on her new job. She said, "Girls who worked with me—they see me on the street and run up and hug me."

Mutual Funds Ask S.E.C. For New Marketing Tool

Industry Proposes Using Shareholders' Assets to Promote Sales

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.

WASHINGTON-The beleaguered mu tural fund industry is furiously designing ways to take advantage of a powerful marketing tool that for decades it could only dream about: the use of fund assets to promote new sales. Several proposals -including a dramatic one in which the nation's higgest fund group contemplates eliminating the traditional 8½ percent sales charge—emerged during four days of hearings that ended here last Tuesday.

At issue is a basic, long-debated ques-tion that was academic until the Securi-ties and Exchange Commission recently indicated a willingness to ease its restrictive policy. The question is: Do share-holders of a mutual fund derive any benefit from an increase in their ranks?

The S.E.C.'s hearings attracted numerous fund sponsors eager to suggest ways to effectively employ the ability to use fund assets, rather than just their own to promote the sale of ahares. Their enthusiasm came from an opportunity to revive a fund industry battered for the last six years by investor disenchantment with the stock market and by fierce competition from real estate, petroleum investments and options.

From 1956 through 1970 the mutual fund industry every year had net inflows of money (the proceeds from new shares sold less redemptions of existing shares) ranging from $1 billion to $3 billioo, But in the next five years there were net re-demptions (excluding the so-called money market funds), averaging about $650 million a year. This trend has continued in 1976, with the best monthly showing so far being a $72 million outflow last

Industry'a Arguments

Not surprisingly, the mutual fund in-dustry argues that it is in the best in-terest of existing shareholders that new as Hawaii offers a $75 million issue of investors be attracted. For one thing, the industry says, a fund must achieve a minimum size if it is to be run efficiently. Street, the Federa that the fund will not lose investment flexibility when old investors cash in

David Silver, senior vice president and general counsel of the Investment Company Institute, the industry's main trade association, put it this way in an interview last week: "There is ultimately a connection between the right to redeem your shares at net asset value and the need for ales. The law gives you this right hut it is not necessarily grounded in the economics of fund management."

Mr. Silver noted that closed-end investment companies—which are like mutual funds except that an Investor liquidates his interest by selling his shares to some itself-have historically traded at large discounts from their shares' underlying value. These discounts now average about 15 percent. "The right of redemption is thus, in a sense, a subsidized one," Mr. Silver asserted.

A host of mutual fund proposals were made at the S.E.C.'s hearings, but nearly all could be placed into two main cate-determined by the fund's directors.

GContinue to bar the taking of fund assets for this purpose but allow the fund's advisor to raise the fee for managing and promoting it.

Comprehensive Proposal

The most startling and fully developed plan was outlined by Hamer H. Budge, a former chairman of the S.E.C. who now heads the Investors Diversified Services funds of Minneapolis.

The I.D.S. idea, combining features of both main categories, calls for abolishing direct sales charges on all mutual funds (making them all no-load) and then substantially raising the advisory fee under On the left's list of nationalization tar-gets are nine of the largest investor-held companies in France, including two of American ownership—ITT France and French Government. a complex formula to cover distribution expenses. A major result would be the shifting of sales expenses from new shareholders to all fund participants.

Market Rates

Sales to Test If Bond Interest Is Still Declining

By JOHN H. ALLAN

Most interest rates last week dropped to their lowest levels in several years, and most investment oankers and bond traders seem to think that they have not yet reached hottom. This thesis will soon be tested on three fronts as the Treasury sells $2.5 billion of 49-month notes to-

According to the consensus in Wall Street, the Federal Reserve will have the opportunity to push Interest rates downward as the nation's money supply grows at a slow rate during the final weeks of 1976 and perhaps in the early weeks of 1977. Furthermore, it will have a reason to nudge rates downward if the economy continues disappointing.

With an ample supply of funds seeking investment, the Street's reasoning goes. the hond market's impressively strong advance seems almost certain to continue.

If consumers suddenly begin to spend niore freely for Christmas, the consensus would clearly be wrong and interest rates would soon begin climbing again. Last Friday there was little inclination to accept such a view, however.

For investors, this week's new issues are likely to provide a strong test of their willingness to accept what must seem to be disappointing yields for those money managers accustomed to the munificent interest rates of 1974 and Gauged against already outstand-ing Treasury securities, the new four-year-and-one-month notes to be sold tomorrow likely will yield less than 6 percent. The Treasury's 6%'s of September 1980 closed Friday at a price to yield 5.84 percent and the 7's of February 1981, at 5.88 percent. These two issues are the closest (carrying interest rate coupons near current levels) that bracket the Dec. 31, 1980, maturity date of the new notes.

Back in the early autumn of 1974, by cootrast, four-year Treasury notes yielded somewhat over 8 percent.

On Wednesday the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company is scheduled to sell $150 million of 40-year triple-A debentures. Last Friday Bell System bonds yielded just slightly more then 8 percent, or 20 percent below the peal: 10.05 percent for such bonds set in mid-Seotember 1974.

If the bond market is strong enough to lower the yield on the Mountain States Telephone deheniures helow 8 percent, it will be the first long-term Bell System issue to yield that little since November 1973, when a small Diamond State Telephone Company issue carried a 7.79 percent rate of return.

Prices on lax-exempt city and state boods climbed sharply enough to lower their yields by 10 to 20 basis points. The Bond Buyer index of tax-exempt bond coming an increasingly important polition from the Paris subway. "But it has so ital issue here: present and future state many means of pressure to make its ownership of husiness.

The unemployment statistics that determine the flow of tens of billions of dollars in Federal job aid to states and cities are about to get a total ovarhaul. Once of interest primarily to academics, the figures have become so sensitive a political harometer that many analysts ascribe Jimmy Carter's Presidential victory largely to the fact that the Federal memployment rate stood at the disturbingly high level of 7.9 percent in the last pre-election

Yet many manpower experts, including a large number in the Bureau of Labor Statistics itself, are convinced that the present measurement standards are too inexact to answer adequately all the public policy needs the White House and Congress rely on them to fill

Indeed, so much doubt surrounds some of the adjustment factors in current use that Prof. Franco Modigliani of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, outgoing president of the American Economics Association, has suggested that President Ford might have lost the election on the basis of "false data" indicating a rise in joblessness since last summer.

Neither Professor Modigliani nor any other critic of the job figures implies that the bureau is deliberately manipulating them for political purposes. On the contrary, most of the concern is about distortions of a highly technical nature that have had the inadvertent effect of hurting the soministration in power rather than helping it. One soch distortion resulted in a collective understatement by the 50 states of 1.3 million jobs in the extent of employment recovery from the recession low. The gap stemmed from a lag in recording new businesses started during the upturn.

Other distortions have arisen from the seasonal weights used by the bureau to make its month by-month renorts comparable. These tend to get nighly questionable when the husiness cycle moves sharply up or down. In recognition of defects in the existing formula. The hureau will incorporate a revised adjustment for seasonality in its November report on employment and unemployment, due next Friday.

However, complaints about the adequacy of the job data go far beyond methodology and other technical fac-tors. Labor objects to the exclusion from the jobless count of workers who have stopped looking because they feel there are no jobs to find. Business contends that the idle rate is inflated by the inclusions of large inumbers of young people and others with no genuine attachment to the labor market. Among the most vociferous arguers for a comprehensive review of all the elements in the employment statistics is the man in charge of the whole program, Julius Shiskin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics. For more than three years, be has been working within the Administration for a study commission comparable to one appointed in 1961 hy President John F. Kennedy. That panel, headed by Prof. Robert A. Gordon of the University of California at Berkeley made recommendations, many of which were adopted a decade dent Ford's Economic Policy Board, made up of the Secretaries of Treasury, Labor and Commerce and the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. Names of possible appointees were sent to the White House, but the project was dropped when Congress began discussing a similar study as part of its economic recovery program.

Do Farmers Use the Futures Market?

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER

How many farmers use the commodity futures market to protect and price their crops? This question has intrigued commodity experts and Government officials for years.

While no one has a definitive answer. the Government's regulatory agencythe Commodity Futures Tradiog Com-mission-hopes to come up with new information with the help of a survey involving 25,000 farmers.

The poll taker, which sends out questionnaires twice a year for its own uses, is the Department of Agriculture's Statistical Reporting Service, known in the department as S.R.S.

Even now about 1,000 S.R.S. survey takers are going from farm to farm in specified areas of the country asking farmers whether they use futures contracts or whether they sell their crops by forward contracting.

Forward contracting involves the sale by a farmer of a crop usually well in advance of harvest, with the price gen-erally fixed or adjusted later according to market trends. This theoretically as-sures the farmer of a place and a price for his crop.

However, it seems that some members of Congress from Texas and other states have been worried because of recent bankruptcies of feedlet operators and small meat packers, who had bought hogs and cattle from farmers on a forward contract basis and then did not pay.

Currently forward contracting is not regulated by the commission, but commodity futures contracts are well regulated.

Commodity traders on the Chicago Board of Trade, center for trading in wheat, corn and soybeans, and on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, where hogs and cattle are traded actively, do not believe that more than I per cent or so of the nation's 2.2 million farmers use the futures market directly, and that only the big farmers, mostly in the Midwest and mostly operating in the grain markets, make use of futures trading. "I would be surprised if the figure is over 1 per cent." a grain trader commented.

He explained that in the case of grains many farmers sell directly to grain elevators, and the operators of the elevators, in turn, hedge the grains they accept by selling futures contracts against their holdings. This is done for price protection. Meanwhile, the commission eagerly awaits the results of the survey, and a spokesman said that It expects out of the 25,000 farmers surveyed to obtain about 9,000 pertinent answers on the questions involving either futures trading or forward contracting. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission said that "while the survey covers a cross section of farmers pro-ducing all agricultural products, C.F.T.C. has a special interest in the views of producers of winter wheat, hogs and cattle, all commodities which are traded on futures markets and through forward contracting."

The survey will be concluded on Dec. 6 and the results probably will not be published "until after the first of the year."

Price of Wheat Seen At the Bottom Now

A 40 per cent drop in the price of a basic commodity in a few months is somewhat unusual. Wheat producers, users and traders in futures contracts have faced this situation recently.

· Wheat which sold as high as $4.20 a bushel in early July for December delivery, dropped to $2.50 a bushel early in November on the Chicago Board of Trade. It closed at $2.571/2 a bushel Friday, only a few cents above the recent contract low.

Many traders believe that the price decline has bottomed out. "I don't think we will see significantly lower prices," John Hawke, a floor trader for Paine Webber, Jackson & Curtis, commented Friday.

He explained Government loan rates for wheat at the farm level average about $2.25 a hushel and that is about what the farmer is getting in many parts of the country. When the price paid at the farm stays around the loan level, farmers are more inclined to take the loan rate and turn the wheat over to the Government. If prices move up, they can reclaim the wheat and sellin the open market.

The current price, due to heavy supplies and slow demand, has thus put a cellar price tag on the wheat at the ioan level.

Last week, for example, Argentina, a major wheat producing country, an-nounced a record or near record wheat crop was expected. At the end of the harvest in January, the total could reach about 13 million tons, which would mean 7 or 8 million tons for

This news had virtually no effect on wheat prices here last week. In fact, traders were much more interested in the fact that snow arrived in some growing areas to give the winter wheat crop the warm cover and the eventual moisture it needs. There had been some worry about dry conditions.

Many of the workers who have made the transition to new jobs say they still miss the camaraderie that made Emer-son "one big family."

Wages were low, they concede, with assemblers starting at $2.25 an hour, and the work was often backbreaking aod nerve-racking-parts moviog oo a conveyor belt at a pace that never let up. But the tensions of the assembly line were softened by frequent dinners and parties thrown on the slightest pretext-someone's birthday or anniversary. Collections were taken whenever there was a death or personal misfor-tune. Foremen often jumped in to help when assemblers fell behind. Badges for quality work were worn proudly.

One day recently John Avezzano, the head of security at the plant who had reached 65 when it closed, was thumbing through a scrapbook that he kept from the day be joined Emerson in 1933.

The scrapbook was filled with pic-tures and stories about workers on picnics and about dances at New York hotels held to raise money for scholar-

Sitting in his Teaneck apartment, Mr. Avezzano stopped at a page with a photo showing workers about to board some buses. "That was in the fall of '57," he recalled, "We went to a Dodger-Giant game. Willie Mays hit a home run and the Giants won, 1-0. There was arguing at the plant for a whole week, and we had a hard time keeping fights down between the Dodger and Giant fans.'

How a Woman Met Challenge Of Losing Job

One thing was sure: "I didn't want to stay home," she sald during an interview in her apartment in Jersey City's Paulus Hook middle-income housing project overlooking the Hud-son River. "I don't like to watch soap operas," she said, gesturing toward her Emerson color television set, a legacy from the plant that most of its workers possess. "I like to get out. Four years stayed home. I felt like a lost person. I've always worked."

When the plant closed, there was no immediate financial pressure for her to find a job. Her husband, working as a loogshoremao, brought in a good in-

She received $1,000 in severance pay and an additional $69 a week for a year and a half from a combination of unemployment beoefits and trade adjustment allowances. A lanky 53-year-old woman, Mrs.

Paige recalled that she thought of looking for a job. But when she calculated what she could make and then what she would have to pay out for someone to take care of her daughter, there would be little left over.

Then her husband developed throat cancer and died two years ago. She began to look for work.

There was the alternative of welfare. which she waved away with a look of disgust. "Who wants to be on welfare when you can go out and work?"

"I knew I was the breadwinner," she said, "but I wasn't worried. As long as you pray and go to church, I know He'd show me where I go from here." She called a friend who worked at the Bramball Day Care Center in Jersey City. There was an opening; two weeks later she was hired. At first, she recalled, it was difficult handling the children, all 2 to 4 years-old. But now she enjoys being with them.

She earns enough to keep herself and her 18-year-old daughter. Celeste, who is studying to become a teacher, well-clothed, well-fed and comfortable. Sitting on a flowered sofa, Mrs. Paige explained her view of life: "You have to have something to eat and keep yourself clean and clothed. The extras, if they come, that's O.K."

Union Fidelity and Its Tender Offer

By ROBERT METZ

With a tender offer for a million sharea of its stock at $5 a share, the Union Fidelity Corporation becomes the latest in a long list of companies seeking to iocrease the equity of large shareholders during a period of depressed stock prices.

In this case, the primary beneficiary of the Nov. 22 offer would be Harry T. Dozor, who, with his family, owns 48.8 percent of the shares of this direct-mail health and accident insurance busioess.

If the million shares are tendered. Mr. Dozor, who is president and chairman, would have absolute control with 61 percent of the stock since the offeriog circular indicates that none of the Dozor shares will be tendered.

As recently as December 1973, when Union Fidelity shares became listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the shares traded as high as 281/2. The $5 tender represents premium over recent prices of about $4, and the company states that it bas agreed to delisting from the Big Board after the conclusion of the offer.

Union Fidelity would then transfer its listing to the American Stock Exchange, assuming its shareholder list of 3,000 has not dropped below the 1,200 public shareholders (including 800 who must own 100 sbares or more) required

In many previous cases in which dominant stockholders bought in shares, a consequence of the tender plan was that the stock lost its listing on the Amex or Big Board and was relegated to the over-the-counter market, where prices are sometimes less representative of underlying values.

While the prospect of over-thecounter trading is not immediately in sight here, at least one Union Fidelity shareholder who is unhappy about the tender plan feels that the acquisition of absolute control by Mr. Dozor would be "intimidating." The shareholder, who asked not to be identified, fears even-tual delisting and a possible attempt to make Union Fidelity a private com-

The shareholder has owned the sbares primarily as an asset play. The book value, at $11.77 a share, is substantially above the $5 tender price, a factor the shareholder feels influenced Mr. Dozor to make the tender offer. The offices of Union Fidelity were closed for a long holiday weekend, and Mr. Dozor could not be reached for comment at the company's Pennsylvania headqauarters.

The offering circular states that the book value would rise to $13.44 if the million shares were, in fact, tendered. Oo the other hand, Union Fidelity is like scores of other small insurance companies in trading below book value. In a stock market that is largely institutionalized, the banks and other major investors tend to neglect the small companies for investments in corporate giants.

One observer familiar with Union Fidelity's business noted that the book value might not be able to be realized sioce few companies were in the same business as Union. It is difficult, he said, to tell what another company, for example, might pay for the assets namely, insurance in force. On the other hand, the company had internal funds on Sept. 30 of cash and short-term debt securities totaling $24.6 million, of which about $13.3 million was available for general corporate

Taking the argument one step further, the observer noted that Union Fidelity earned 54 cents a share in 1975, up from 35 cents a share in 1974. The 1975 earnings would be about nine times the tender price. There are many other insurance companies, he noted, that sell for no more than nine times

In 1975 health and accident insur-ance amounted to 86 percent of Union Fidelity's premium income, about the same as in 1974. Four states-California, New York, Pennsylvania and Florida-produced about a third of the premiums written, which totaled about $30 million in 1975.

The company spends heavily for advertising in the mass media to sell its policies. Such outlays ran about $5 million in 1975 and will total about $6 million in 1976, with "the hulk of the expenditures being devoted to a can-cer-benefit policy," according to the

Ads on Supermarket Shopping Carts

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

Because an ad inside a supermarket would give a package goods company one last chance to influence a purchase, any number of entrepreoeurs have attempted over the years to design in-

They have ranged from the simple to the complex, from mere posters to complicated electronic systems that would combine in-store security with closed-circuit TV commercial messages. There have been many failures.

Then along came Bruce Failing of Westhampton Beach, L.L., who once operated a string of dry cleaning shops, was executive director of the Long Is-land Duck Association and became marketing director of a Boston meatpacking company.

Although his idea—ads on shopping carts—was not new, Mr. Failing seems to be succeeding. His company is attracting scores of major advertisers and is expanding its coverage areas.

Actmedia, as the company is called, will move into the Los Angeles market in January, having operated for the last three years in New England, parts of New York State and Atlanta.

"We're not in Metro New York, mainly because it's a beast, but we're targeting it for May 1977," said. Bruce Failing Jr., 29 years old, who joined his father as executive vice president right after he picked up his M.B.A. degree from Harvard.

What might well be the aecret of Actmedia's success is that it is properly capitalized and researched. Bruce Jr., who had taught financing at Darmouth's Tuck School before entering Harvard, has raised some $2 million, the most recent piece of which came from the sale of 20 percent of the company to an insurance company, a num-ber of banks and two individuals.

As to the research, Actmedia never even moved into New England until it had been tested in supermarkets in central New York with the help of a friendly Cornell professor and some students. Research there showed that on-cart advertisers were averaging 15 percent sales gains and research continues.

In an interview the other day the younger Mr. Failing, accompanied by John H. Stevenson, director of marketing, said the very heart of the operatioo was the field force.

Actmedia, he said, has a 300-woman uniformed force that uses company-supplied cars, with each woman servic-ing and maintaining carts in about 60 stores. They install the plastic devices on the fronts of carts and they change the ads. Up to now the ads have been 6 inches by 8 inches, with two to a cart. In Los Angeles they are going to be 8 by 10. If a supermarket has 150 carts, each advertiser gets 30 ads. Actmedia carries 12 noncompeting advertisers per region per cycle.

A cycle is eight weeks. The advertising rates are based on store traffic, details of which are obtained from cash-register transactions. The rate is $5 cents per 1,000 impressions, with the theory being that anyone going through the store will get an impres-

It costs an average of $300 to equip each store, and afterward the stores get 20 percent of the gross advertising revenues.

Now for the name dropping: Actmedia, a commissionable medium, has on its client list such beavyweight advertisers as Colgate-Palmolive, Lever, General Foods, General Mills, Gillette, Carnation, Scott Paper, Clorox and

Fortune's Minor Changes

There were rumbles a while back that Fortune magazine was contemplating major changes in format and frequency. Its management, however, explained that such rumors must have come out of the periodic reviews conducted by that Time Inc. property.

Well, the December issue does have some changes—but nothing overwhelming. For one thing, every major story is now self-contained. There will be no more jumping to the back of the book. There are also a few new features, such as "Keeping Up," made np of brief items of interest. Another new feature, "Bed and Board," will begin in January. It will cover "attractive" hotels and restaurants "off the beaten track," which Fortune describes as such places as Peoria or Sioux City.

Agency for Bank Concern

Keyes, Martin & Company of Springfield. N. J., has just picked up the ac-count of United Jersey Banks, Hackensack. The client, which has 12 banks and four other financial companies, spends more than $1.5 million a year for advertising and sales promotioo.

TV Compensation Plan

TAT Communications, the production and distribution company of Norman Lear, has devised a new form of compensation for a television series it will launch next spring. The plan is designed to make success in the ratings more profitable.

The five-days-a-week series, "Ail That Glitters," is described by the company as a white-collar version of its blue-collar "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Under the plan, a station will pay for each one-time use of a program segment, as done for other shows, but TAT will keep 30 seconds of the six minutes of commercial time to sell off liself. That is how success in the ratings will pay off, since ad rates are based on ratings. TAT will use its current sales force to sell this two and a half minutes a week.

Campaign for Toy Safety

Inspired by a line from "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town," McDonald & Little, Atlanta, has created a "You'd" Better Watch Out" public service campaign for the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission. Advertis-ing has been prepared in both English and Spanish for print and radio. The ads seek to educate consumers about buying safe toys for children.

heating oil-technically known as middle distillate-from controls last spring, a number of legislators, led by representatives from the Nortbeast, which has been suffering most from the high cost of imported oil, insisted on a monitoring system to assess accurately whether the new pricing freedom was leading to unwarranted increases.

Indexes Revised Upward

Frank G. Zarb, the F. E. A. administrator, agreed and now the agency calculates each week its estimate of what the seiling price should be, after taking into account seasonal variations as well as new iocreases in petroleum or non-petroleum costs. If the price of heating oil rises more than 2 cents above this index figure, the F. E. A. has said that it will hold hearings on proposed remedial actions. The F. E. A.'s announcement also noted that in the Northeast, beating oil prices, although currently high by national standards at 39.9 cents for the week ending Nov. 13, are still 1.9 below the 'trigger" calculated for the region.

Because index numbers bave been revised upward as winter draws closer, this comparison masks the real upward movement in heating oil prices. Sioce June, prices have risen by 1.5 cents nationally and by 1.7 cents in the Northeast.

Heating oil prices tend to rise in the fall as a result of pre-winter demand. The F. E. A. announcement also contended that in the Northeast, prices have been affected by a higher cost of imported refined heating oil.

Despite the F. E. A.'s contention that decontrol 2 is working, some consumer groups remain unconvinced.

"There's enough of a price rise bere for both the F. E. A. and the Congress to take a good look before we can determine whether the downward pressure on prices that the F. E. A. predicted really happened," said James F. Flug, director and counsel of the Energy Action Com-mittee. "The question is not so much the absolute numbers as who's doing what and why."

The F. E. A. acknowledged in its release that the most recent weekly figures are estimates and that subsequent revision could increase the reported figures by one-tenth to four-tenths of a cent per

What's new on the Squeeze? Not much. All three networks remain virtually sold out of prime time through next year's third quarter, at prices 20% to 30% over last year.

Prime time, daytime or fringe, it continues to be a runaway seller's market.

Clearly, things aren't getting better. But 1977 deadlines are getting shorter.

That's why Newsweek has put together this handy TV Squeeze Kit. It's filled with facts and figures and useful information that can help you not only survive in the TV Squeeze, but actually come out ahead of the game.

Here's what it includes:

1. The TV Squeeze. How to beat it.

This comprehensive guide, based on Newsweek's new multi-media presentation, follows television from its infancy up through the current years. You'll see how the Squeeze happened. You'll learn what sensible alternatives exist.

2. The Magazine/Television Mix in a New Perspective.

This brochure discusses how print and television complement each other. Drawing on the recent W.R. Simmons study, "Media Imperatives," it shows how magazines and TV. when used in combination, can give you more GRPs for your money while decreasing your cost per thousand impressions.

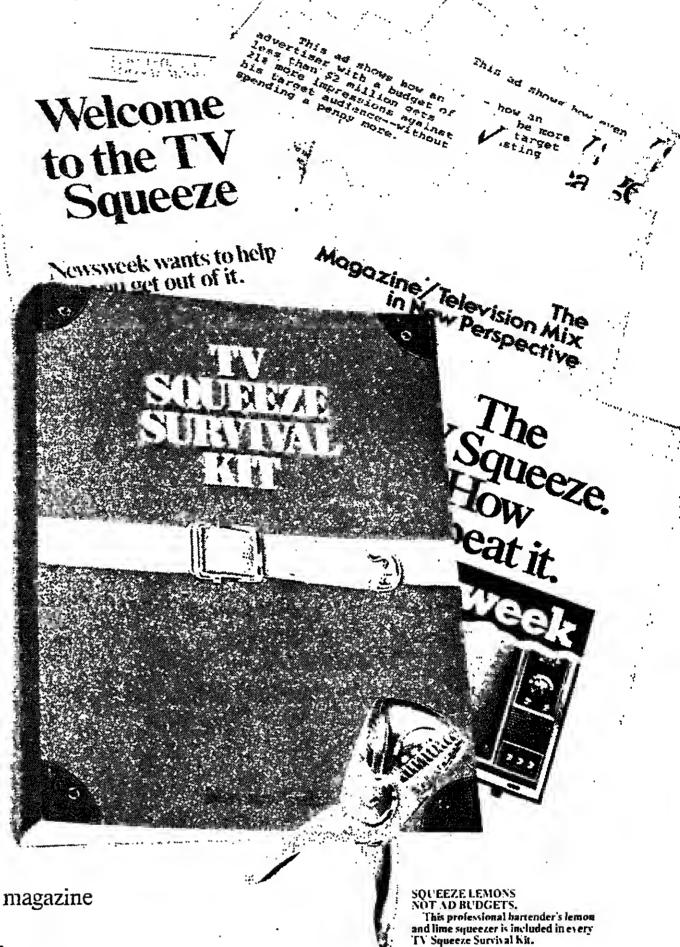

3. A Guide to National Media.

This pocket guide puts television and magazine costs and figures right at your fingertips.

by Australia's powerful mining and agricultural interests, whose export earnings have been hit hy inflation, wage costs and strikes. It was condemned as inflationary by trade union spokesmen and by the opposition Labor Party.

Spokesmen of the powerful Australian farmers, woolgrowers and grazers federations had argued that their exports had lost 20 percent of their competitiveness in world markets in two years. Mining companies maintained that foreign investors were holding up commitments in Australia to await devaluation.

Australia's devaluation prompted suspension of foreign exchange trading in New Zealand, which counts Australia as its biggest export market. New Zealand devalued its currency 15 percent oo Aug. 10, 1975, and there were predictions the New Zealand dollar now might be

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28-Australian devaluation comes hard on the heels of a sharp fall in the value of the Canadian dollar, the devaluation of the Mexican peso and against a background of continuing curreocy upheavals in Western Eu-

He had learned to do that at the University of Wisconsin while getting his Ph.D. in forest genetics in 1975.

Twins Are Object of Search

Dr. Karnosky bad found that the cheesecloth technique, with controlled light, heat and humidity, produced one-inch high seedlings in from 7 to 10 days with 90 percent germination, By dividing the 20-foot-long seed tables into small grids he could examine each plant to see if there were any twins. If there were, he collected those, discarded the remaining placts and immediately scattered a new crop of seeds on fresh cheesecloth.

"We find about one twin for every thousand seeds," Dr. Karnosky said as he bent his head over the seed table. He noted that he and his assistants bad examined almost two million seedlings since the project started.

So far, by a precisely controlled pro-tocol, Dr. Karnosky has been able to grow 125 elm twins to heights of about 12; inches. Three of these twins have shown promise of having a reduced chromosoma number. But it has not been shown cooclusively if they do have balf the normal chromosome complement.

Buying through a real estate broker?

Smart. Real estate brokers can save you time and effort. They know, the market . . . where the best prospects are . . . can help with the many details connected with the transfer of property. For a broker in your vicinity; check the listings in these classified pages. The New York Times carries far more ads of real estate brokers than any other newspaper in the New York area.

Andra L. T. Strauss. Psychologist, Is Wed To Rabbi Karnofsky

Andra Lee Tonick Strauss and Rabbl Keith Mark Karnofsky were married yesterday in Harrison, N.Y. Rabhi Arnold Jacob Wolf, assisted by Rabbis Donald Aigen, Richard Spiegel and Gerald Serotta, performed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Strauss Jr. The hridegroom is the son of Eunice Lent Karnofsky Hendler of Hewlett, L.I., and the late Hyman Karnofsky, a lawyer in Buffalo.

The bride graduated from Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., and received a master's degree in psychology from Temple University. She is with the New England Marriage and Family Counseling Center in Groton, Conn. A daughter of the late Harry Tunick of Harrison, she was adopted hy Mr. Strauss, who is president of the Na-tional Diamond Laboratory of Peekskill, N.Y.; Los Angeles and New Haven, Ind. Her father was a patent attorney for RCA and Sylvania and president of the Joseph Tunick & Sons Furniture Company in Port Chester, N.Y.

The hridegroom, who is rabbi at the Jewish Reconstructionist Society of Brooklyn and a first flight officer with Pilgrim Airlines in New London, Conn., graduated from the Nichols School in Buffalo and Columbia University. He received master's degrees in religion and psychology from Temple and was ordained at the Reconstructionist Rabhinical College in Philadelphia. His mother is an artist and lecturer.

Tex Antoine to Return to WABC After Last Week's Suspension

Tex Antoine, the WABC-TV weather reporter who was suspended indefinitely last Wednesday night after he made a remark on the air about rape, will return as the Channel 7 weatherman, Kenneth H. MacQueen, the station's vice president and general manager said last

"We'll decide this week when he'll return to the show," said Mr. MacQueen. 'We don't think we will use this as a thrust to end his career. We have no plans to fire or terminate Tex."

Mr. Antoine, who has heen a television weatherman for more than 27 years, was criticized by station officials after last Wednesday's 7 P.M. newscast for "an inexcusable lapse in judgement." Although he apologized on the air, he was suspended "indefinitely" until the station could decide "what further action is warranted."

Tremor Felt in Pakistan Cities

RAWALPADINI, Pakistan, Nov. 28 (UPI)-Three mild earth tremors struck the twin cities of Rawalpindi and Islamabad early today, sending some residents scurrying into the streets. No casualties or damage were reported.

Iessica Friedman Bride of J.-P. Joseph

Jessica Friedman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel E. Friedman of New York, was married yesterday evening to Jean-Paul Joseph, son of Mrs. Andre Joseph of San Salvador, El Salvador, and Strasbourg, France, and the late Mr. Joseph. Rabbi Martin J. Zion performed the ceremony in the White and

YEARS OF INFAMY

An extraordinary, six-part series on the monumental struggle to end slavery in the British Empire.

The hour-long, historical dramas, spanning 84 years, begin in 1750, when Atlantic crossings of nightmare slave ships were at their height. They end in 1834, when slavery was outlawed throughout the Empir - almost 30 years before our own Emancipation Proclamation.

Ruby Dee hosts, and presents an American perspective on the fight against slavery

The Crime Of Juvenile Justice.

The terror that now infects many New York neighborhoods has its origins in a system of justice that permits muggers and killers to walk the streets for one reason aloneyouth. What is the logic behind a system of Juvenile Justice that seems to encourage - not prevent - juvenile crime? Who is really to blame for the escalating violence of the young against the elderly? And what's being done to curb the recent rash of juvenile crime and to revamp a family court system that has been called "the longest running scandal in the state."

For an incisive look at a problem affecting everyone, tonight watch Part 1 of a 3-part Survival Report in the news by Correspondent Bill Greenwood.

We're big for our age because we're right for our age.

We're big for our age:

Psychology Today is only nine years old. Yet in that short time its circulation has climbed to 1,150,000. Phenomenal growth like this doesn't happen by chance. It can only result when a magazine meets the needs and desires of a large segment of the population.

We're right for our age:

The last decade has seen social changes that have had significant impact on traditional American ideas. New values have emerged. A concern with physical self-enhancement, a blurring of male and female roles. A new perspective toward work and play. All around us we see a new concern with one's self, with one's own contentment. And a desire for a richer, fuller life.

These new values have been embraced by a new generation of adults and have set off trends which will have important marketing implications.

Daniel Yankelovich, noted social scientist and researcher, put it this way: "These new values make all the difference in the world in the kinds of products that people buy, in the way they use these products, in retailing patterns, in uses of discretionary income, in leisure time, in work attitudes that affect them as employees, in attitudes toward companies that affect people as consumers. In every conceivable way."

Why Psychology Today?

Psychology Today is a natural reflection of this change in values. It's the one magazine that addresses itself to the subjects and interests that are meaningful to these people in the way they live. No wonder its circulation has climbed to 1.150,000 in just nine years. No wonder 4½ million*educated, affluent readers turn to Psychology Today every month.

These readers are creating markets for quality products and services of virtually every description. Talk to them in the magazine they listen to. Psychology Today. It's right for your time.
